VOL. VI.....NO. 1796. NEW-YORK, MONDAY, JUNE 22, 1857. PRICE TWO CENTS.

GENERAL WILLIAM WALKER.

Personalities of his Men.

On Saturday, Gen. WALKER was called upon by Gen. WEBERGER, HIRAM M. FULLER, Adj. M. G. from Philadelphia, ex-Gov. EDDY, of N. J., J. B. MARRAPIER, U. S. N., Judge EDDY, M. A. SHERMAN and others.

As frequent calls are made by persons seeking information of their missing friends, the General desires all such inquirers to address themselves to the Adjutant-General, Major Jesse T. Mosby, at New-Orleans, who has the registry of all the men in his possession. Pressing invitations are made upon the General to attend concerts, theatres, and all kinds of public and private entertainments. Autographs, photographs and daguerreotypists have him at every turn. Invitations are made to attend Lola Montez's Lecture, and to receive evening at Bryant's Minstrels, some of the lovely fair ones desiring to get a personal intimacy with the Gallant Chieftain.

Prominent among the friends who accompany Gen. WALKER are his parents daily 24.

Major General HERMANSEN, who was a prominent officer under Gen. WALKER, during a considerable period in Nicaragua. Gen. HERMANSEN was born in Finland, in 1816, of Swedish parents; and although still an comparatively young man, he has occupied many responsible positions. When seventeen years of age he volunteered to serve under BUNALAGERSKIOLD in the Sweaborg Province. The Spanish war was then at its height, and HERMANSEN soon to be Captain of Bernadotte's body-guard, Knight of St. Fernando, &c. The "Elliot Correspondence" and HERMANSEN's Spanish Revolution. These left History of the war in Spain served as an introduction to WELLINGTON, Soult and others.

Returning to Spain, with the rank of Lieutenant-Colonel, before he was twenty, he was included in Quilliam's list for the Imperial command. General De Lara urged that the Spanish forces were too [illegible] and offered battle. The Spanish General commanded in his stead his chief of the staff, a man without military knowledge, was glad to avail himself of Colonel HERMANSEN's instructions in the management of his force. The Foreign Legion was beaten back on the Catalonian, and their leader wounded. He was subsequently of the expedition which marched on Madrid from Aragon and Castile. After the battle of Villar-de-los-Navarros, he took the command of the cavalry, and obtained, as a reward for his gallantry, the rank of full Colonel, and the title of Knight of Isabella. When within three miles of Madrid, he was attacked by the Queen's cavalry in great force. Seventeen times that day HERMANSEN led his men to the charge; only on the last occasion did he succeed in breaking their ranks. Once broken, they were routed. This was the last of his successful exploits in Spain. A few days afterward he was taken prisoner, and released on parole not to serve again during the war. His next service was in Circassia, where he spent a campaign in the Russian service, and from the knowledge thus obtained he compiled a report on the Caucasian countries, which was published as a public document by the Russian Government.

He next appeared in Hungary, and exchanged the pen for the sword when the crisis in that unhappy country was approaching. There were but 30,000 men, with 1,000 pieces of cannon, in Comorn; the question was, how to use these men. HERMANSEN proposed a plan of campaign. Gen. GYULOI so highly approved it that he obtained the chief command in Comorn, and was invested with all the despotic powers which the Diet had conferred on two former representatives—the Minister-of-War and Count BATTHYANI. When this struggle was over Gen. HERMANSEN turned his attention to the subject of improvements in firearms. He made various experiments with the Prussian needle gun and HAZE's Rifle in England, and superintended the construction of the first Minie ever made in the United States. He likewise devoted a part of his leisure to literature, wrote for the magazines, and published one or two works—the "White Slave" among others—which have been translated. When the war in Nicaragua became important, Gen. HERMANSEN was called upon to join Gen. WALKER, which he did. His career there, like that of his chief, is still fresh in the public mind. After the evacuation and burning of Granada, he was made Major-General, and continued in command until the end. He is now in the City with Gen. WALKER. Of the others:

Gen. ROSANDO CRAWFORD WEBAT is probably the most prominent. He was born in 1816, in Alexandria, Va., and was educated in Nashville, Tennessee. When war was declared with Mexico, he enlisted in the United States Army, as a Captain of dragoons, and served throughout the campaign. When his regiment was disbanded, Gen. WEBAT, then a captain, volunteered again with his command, and went on with Gen. SCOTT to the City of Mexico. At the close of the war, he was mentioned by Gen. SCOTT in his report to Congress, in terms of high favor. He was subsequently admitted to the bar at New-Orleans, but immediately afterwards joined the Cuban expedition under LOPEZ, with the Louisiana regiment. When that failed, he returned. In 1853, he was wounded at Cardenas, while with CARAVAJAL, in the revolution in Northern Mexico; and was also wounded at Matamoras, at Caralvo and at Camargo. In 1854, he was again invited to Mexico, by President COMONFORT, to command his artillery. Accepting the invitation, he was made Brigadier-General in the Mexican Army. During the time he remained, he was Military Governor of Vera Cruz, and had command of the army and fleet. He was in command when the castle of San Juan del Ulloa was taken from the insurgents. In August, 1856, he resigned the Mexican service to join Gen. WALKER, in Nicaragua. Leaving this City in December of that year he arrived in the harbor of San Juan del Norte a few days after the river San Juan had been taken by the Costa Ricans. Finding that he could not reach Gen. WALKER, and that there was a party under Col. LOCKRIDGE, on Punta Arenas, preparing to force the river, he immediately offered himself as a volunteer to do anything for the advancement of the cause. A soldier of his experience was a great acquisition to the little force; and he was immediately offered the command of the Artillery, which he accepted. He superintended the mounting of the guns, and after the little army had been reinforced by the party under Col. TITUS and Capt. FAYSOUX, commanded the Artillery at the taking of Cody's Point and Serapiqui. In both fights his experience and coverage commanded the admiration of all. When the delays of Col. LOCKRIDGE, and the peculiar retreat of Col. TITUS from before Castillo had dispirited the men, they [illegible] WEBAT in expressing the opinion that, [illegible] Gen. WEBAT as Commander in Chief, [illegible] season to lead them on, the place of [illegible] would have been different, and the fall of San Carlos sure. This opinion was not, by any means, confined to the ranks. When success became impossible on the river, Gen. WEBAT returned with the others to Greytown. He was on the N. J. Scott when the boiler exploded and was blown into the river. As soon as he rose to the surface, he, as is his custom, did not wait to ask himself whether he was seriously injured, but, grasping the foot of his comrades that came within his reach, swam with him to the shore. It proved to be young COGSWELL, of Philadelphia, who was a Lieutenant, and as brave as any man in the army. But, poor fellow, he was dead. After aiding to the interment of his power he went down with the others to Greytown, and, after making every effort to join Gen. WALKER on the other side, without succeeding, finally returned to this City, where he is at present. When in the U. S. Army, Gen. WEBAT was considered the finest-looking man in it, and also a man of undoubted courage. He is now a man of noble presence, and his subsequent experience has enlarged his military knowledge, and fixed the fact, that the original idea of his bravery was not exaggerated. In case another expedition to Nicaragua should not be organized for some time, we have been informed that he will remain in the City and commence the practice of law.

Col. ANDERSON, another of Gen. WALKER's officers, has had an adventurous life. He was born in the City of Brooklyn, of Scotch parents, and is still a young man. When the "California fever" made its appearance here, he left for that region and remained there, with varied fortune, until the invitation to Gen. WALKER to join the Liberals in Nicaragua. He joined him immediately, and became one of the "Original Fifty-six." To mention minutely all his acts, while under WALKER there, would require more space than we can spare. From the time he arrived in Nicaragua until his return a short time since he was ever active and foremost where there was danger. He has more wounds than any other man who served there. While suffering from a [illegible] in 1856, he received a furlough [illegible] the United States for a brief period. [illegible] presented him with a sword of the [illegible], with appropriate inscriptions. He went back to Nicaragua, the last time, in December, 1856, and on arriving in the Harbor of San Juan del Norte, found that the River San Juan had been taken by the Costa Ricans. Like Gen. WEBAT, he immediately joined the party under Col. LOCKRIDGE, and commanded again with honor, at Cody's Point, and at the taking of Serapiqui. He is as brave a man and as steadfast a friend of Gen. WALKER, as ever served under him.

Lieutenant-Colonel HOUSTON is not in this City at present. He was in Nicaragua before General WALKER arrived there, and had greater knowledge of the country and the people, than any other man in Gen. WALKER's army. He joined Gen. WALKER soon after his arrival, and did him valuable service as interpreter and Commissary General. He was known to all the principal men of the country and a great favorite of the people. Being universally respected he was enabled to do much towards the advancement of his General, until the latter made the mistakes which resulted in the execution of CORAL and the entrapment of RIVAS. Col. HOUSTON visited the United States in 1856, and returned with Gen. WEBAT and Col. ANDERSON, in January of 1857. Finding the river closed, he volunteered under LOCKRIDGE, and was immediately appointed to the command of a company. For excellent services at the taking of Cody's Point, he was raised first to the rank of Major and then to that of Lieutenant-Colonel. He returned with the remains of the river party, and is now in Ohio, awaiting the organization of another expedition to Nicaragua. There was no man in the army more highly esteemed than Lieutenant-Colonel HOUSTON.

Col. Stephen P. HALL, a son of Ex-Mayor HALL, of Brooklyn, was born in that city, and educated in Erasmus Hall, Flatbush. He entered the United States Army soon after war was declared as existing with Mexico. He was mustered into the service with the regiment of New-York Volunteers, at Fort Hamilton, as First Lieutenant of Company I. The Colonel, W. B. BURNETT, honored him with the positions of Commissary of Ordnance, of Quartermaster, and of Adjutant. He was afterwards selected as Captain of Company C, and went with Gen. SCOTT to the City of Mexico. He came home at the close of the war, and was brevetted Major by the special act of the Legislature "for gallant and distinguished services in the Mexican War." He was identified with the first organization under LOPEZ, and when it was feared that war would come out of the Black Warrior affair, he organized the "Worth Legion," and became its Colonel. That organization was continued until Gen. WALKER arrived in Nicaragua. Being a friend of his cause, he decided to help him. A meeting of the officers was called, and they decided to go. The result was the embarking of 480 men on board the Northern Light, and their subsequent arrest. Col. HALL was put under $3,000 bail on a charge of having violated the neutrality laws, but he was not tried, and when his bail had been canceled he left for General WALKER. While with him, served as Commissary-General with the rank of Colonel. He remained in the service until attacked by the fever, when he was urged to go home. He was in the first battle of Masaya, and at Granada. He received a ninety days' furlough, and left for home on the 5th of November, 1856. He returned in the first steamer after his parole had expired, and found the San Juan River closed. He did not report to Col. LOCKRIDGE, but nevertheless acted as Commissary-General until he became satisfied of the incompetency of LOCKRIDGE, and left. He could not reach Gen. WALKER, and consequently he returned home. He is now in the City.

Capt. J. EMORY FAYSOUX is a Pennsylvanian, born in 1833. He entered the American army in 1853, on the staff of Col. WHARTON, and served until 1855. At the close of the Mexican war he surveyed the river Mescala, or what is known as the Ramsey route to California. He was subsequently connected with the Lopez Cuban Expedition as Captain, and as aid to LOPEZ. He went to Nicaragua in June, 1856, and received a Captain's commission from Gen. WALKER. While in the country he was stationed principally at Granada. After the expedition to Sapoa, he was taken with the fever, and received a furlough. On his way home he suffered from the yellow fever at Greytown so much that he was not able to return until the January following. He arrived at Serapiqui with a company just in time to take active part in the capture of that fort. After raising the J. N. Scott with his command, he became dissatisfied, in consequence of his failure to reach Gen. WALKER. He proceeded to Aspinwall, when finding he could not reach him from that point, he returned home.

Col. LOCKRIDGE, who commanded upon the San Juan River. He stands six feet three inches in stockings, is slightly round shouldered; he wears a black beard and moustache, and has nothing fierce or warlike in his features. He is a native of Louisville, Ky.; and is only 26 years of age. He spent some six years in Costa Rica previous to the advent of General WALKER, and still considers himself a citizen of that country. The cause, in his opinion, was never more hopeful, and there was never so abundant means at their disposal for carrying on the war; although the demoralization of the camp prevails about the head-quarters, [illegible] the particular movements intended. Col. T. is quite averse to being publicly [illegible] in connection with the war, but this diffidence evidently does not put on from any want of confidence in his future success, as he was among the first to embark with WALKER, and says he means to devote himself still to the "freedom of Nicaragua." His manner is mild and affable, but he expresses himself with much force, and seems well informed upon the affairs of Nicaragua. He left on Friday afternoon for the South. As General HERMANSEN shook hands and parted with him, he remarked: "I shall not see you again until we meet at Philippi." LOCKRIDGE said: "Yes, we will meet again at Philippi."

Capt. FAYSOUX, who commanded the little schooner Granada, and with his two six-pounders engaged the Costa Rican man-of-war brig Oute de Abril, blowing her up, and sinking her after a fight of only twenty minutes, is the Paul Jones of the filibusters. He is a little man, physically, but seems to have achieved a greatness by this single act of daring gallantry, which many an aspirant for fame will not attain in a lifetime. Capt. FAYSOUX is very taciturn, and it is with much difficulty that he can be drawn into conversation. A person who was present at his encounter with the Corsair [illegible] the following incident illustrating [illegible] that engagement. The brig [illegible] broadsides, and the two small [illegible] the Granada had been fired in such [illegible] the guns had become hot. FAYSOUX [illegible] to cease firing to allow them to cool, [illegible] away; but as his men were disposed to keep on firing, he threw himself astride one of the guns, and repeated his orders peremptorily. [illegible] the smoke cleared away and revealed [illegible] tion of his enemy; waiting for another [illegible] the brig, which only cut away some of his [illegible] tore the sails, the gun on which he sat was [illegible] and by a well-directed aim it struck the enemy's [illegible] arine; in an instant she was blown into fragments, and the contest was over. Captain F. lowered away his boats and made every exertion to save the lives of the Costa Ricans who had been thrown into the sea by the explosion. At the time that he ran his schooner out to sea, wing-and-wing, to engage this well armed brig, it is said that he had not provisions enough on board to make a breakfast for his crew. Capt. F. complains of the report made by telegraph to the New-York press, that while in Washington he had applied to the Secretary of the Navy to obtain his back pay as a member of the Texan Navy. He says he merely made an inquiry as to the construction of the late act of Congress indemnifying the officers of the Texas Navy, of which he was a midshipman, and ascertained that it only included the commissioned officers; having obtained this information he asked no other questions and left.

Col. WAYNE, who with Capt. FAYSOUX are the only officers properly constituting the staff of General WALKER, is a native of South Carolina, and was one of the 56 who joined WALKER in September, 1855. He has been in all the principal engagements in Nicaragua.

Don PEDRO SELVA is a young man belonging to an old family, of the first respectability in Nicaragua. In 1854, when the Democratic party rose against the aristocratic party, of which President CHAMORRO was the leader, he joined the revolution and cast in his lot with the liberals, attaching himself to the army as a Lieutenant. Don FRANCISCO CASTELLON having been named Provisional President, SELVA was attached to his staff, and acted occasionally as his private Secretary. He was thus familiar with all the important movements of the war. He came to the United States accredited from General WALKER as Secretary of Legation, having also letters from JOHN H. WHEELER, then the U. S. Minister at Leon. SELVA, like most of his associates, expresses much reluctance to making any public mention of himself, one reason for which is his unwillingness to direct attention to, or in any wise compromise, his friends who are still living in Granada, but who, he affirms, took no part whatever in the war. He speaks of his mother with great affection, and affirms that for three years past he has not tasted ardent spirits of any kind, having given her his pledge that he would wholly abstain. SELVA speaks the French language with the same fluency that he does his own, and converses readily too in English. He is very much esteemed among his associates for his quiet, unobtrusive manner.

"Don ANDRES," as he is called by his Nicaraguan associates, is a tall, well formed, and polite young man, who has become an exile from Central America for the part he took in favor of the Democratic Party. He was born in Jamaica, and is a very light mulatto, graceful in his person, and precise and smooth in speech. He went to Granada, Nicaragua, when a lad, and accumulated a fine property. According to Mr. General CABEBAN, who was at his house in Granada, he owned a kind of palatial residence, which was burned when General HERMANSEN destroyed the town. Don ANDRES is strongly in favor of the movement, and believes fully in General WALKER. He has no desire to become a resident of Nicaragua again, until the cause in which he has embarked is successful. He was with General HERMANSEN through the memorable siege of Granada. There he distinguished himself for the grace with which he came down from the elegant diet of his Hacienda, to mule steaks and roast dog. Whilst executing an order for General HERMANSEN, he received a [illegible] through the top of his panama and his [illegible] Hat. He fully indorses [illegible] the conduct of WALKER, towards [illegible] often set down at [illegible] the General had been more [illegible] decided better in the management [illegible].

During an [illegible] of a [illegible] shipping merchant with Gen. WALKER, on Thursday last, he imparted to the General the important information that $150,000 had been contributed and paid, of his own knowledge, by the California Mail Steamship, and the Panama Railroad Companies, for the purpose of breaking him up in Nicaragua, in order to get control of that route. Upon inquiry at the quarters named this statement is declared wholly untrue; that not a cent has ever been contributed for that purpose by these Companies, and that, on the contrary, they would much rather have paid something to keep Gen. WALKER fighting than to stop his operations, as the Panama steamers were actually doing a better business while the war was on in Nicaragua than they have done since.

GEORGE LAW speaks eloquently of Gen. WALKER. He defies any one to point to an instance in history where a man has accomplished so much with such small means. The exploits of CORTES were nothing to WALKER's, says he; CORTES met a primitive people [illegible] firearms, and could only op[illegible] the Spaniards by the spear. [illegible] WALKER with his 56 men he [illegible] Nicaragua, Costa Rica, Guatemala, the British men-of-war, VANDERBILT, the Panama Railroad Company, the Pacific Mail Steamship Company, and everybody else. Finally, Mr. LAW thinks his friend marvelously resembles General TAYLOR.

Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times.

BOSTON, Thursday, June 18.

You will have had a general account of the proceedings here this week, but may yet find a few notes by a New-Yorker, looking on, acceptable.

A New-Yorker in Boston is struck at all times by the simple country-like manner of most people he comes by chance in contact with. The patronizing and host-like manner of the hackmen, as well as their direct way of doing their business, is very interesting. I have two or three times used a public carriage without any previous bargaining, and been asked at the end of the route to pay the exact sum of thirty-seven and a half cents. Any man who should be known to have acted so carelessly in New-York, even to a reporter, would hardly escape being presented with a service of plate for his greenness. The faculties of self-preservation and combativeness are at once excited when one hears the voice, or lets his eye rest for an instant upon a New-York hackman. A Boston driver inspires me with a delicious sense of respect, confidence and repose. I ask what I have to pay, as I would ask for cream in an Orange County farm-house.

On a holiday in New-York, however attractive, the largest part of our crowd is composed of New-Yorkers, and our country guests are to be distinguished by a glance; they are another sort of mankind. Here, it was perceptible, chiefly by the car, that eight-tenths of the crowd of the streets were from out of town, yet were familiar with the town—a whining, but sensible, wide awake people, able to make themselves at home, and not a bit afraid of pick-pockets, nor awed by swells.

The truth is, that but a small part of Boston is to be found on this little peninsula, and half the remaining people of Massachusetts share the metropolitan character of Bostonians. Town and country are married; the town people seem country-bred, and the country people not a little town-bred.

In the military parade Boston did not compare favorably with New-York. There were some tolerably drilled bodies, though none which would compare with the 7th, but the average was much below ours. In general the men looked gawky and the officers nervous and ill at ease. Nearly all were dressed shockingly; not that their uniforms were the worst which could have been contrived for a soldier's purposes, though generally bad enough, but they were put on awkwardly and slovenly, and were frequently vilely dirty and dilapidated. Since the Burns trial, I understand, the military amusement has fallen into disrepute here, and such was the appearance of things. The Bostonians have been proud of "the Lancers," and they are the best body of militia horsemen I have seen; still, one would think a bounty had been offered for all the round-shouldered fellows in town to join them. They are worse-dressed than most of the infantry, and the narrow white sword-belt over the right shoulder draws across the flabby breast of their owners scarlet coat in a manner which awakens a sufferer's sympathy in the observer; not more than one [illegible] wore a coat sitting simply on the chest. A [illegible] these artillery looked well, for militia horse[illegible]

The [illegible] of the buildings on the route of the [illegible] on the grounds in Charlestown were of the [illegible] simple, with nothing original or commemorative. We have had much better in all respects in New-York, but so is our general taste in such matters.

The Pavilion was very simple, entirely inelegant and unadorned. I judge it to be the same canvas formerly used at the Hippodrome in New-York.

Considering Mr. EVERETT as beyond commendation or criticism, Gov. GARDNER was the only speaker I heard with any satisfaction. He has a good address and speaks fluently, confidently and cheerfully. The Masonic "exercises," addresses, declamations, and recitations, were unspeakably stupid and tiresome; yet only one or two of them so bad as to be droll. Throughout, the audience was very unresponsive. Mr. EVERETT's reference to "the colored man, SALEM," drew the loudest and longest cheers; the Union saving business was remarkably poor, applause coming chiefly from the dignitaries and office-holders on the stage. Mr. PEABODY, who had a prominent seat among the Governors and veterans, leading off. Mr. MASON's remarks were received with quiet dignity by the Massachusetts audience, and the Free Soil speakers who followed him were not tempted to any pertinent response. The announcement of the President that the Seventh had received orders from New-York to return immediately produced a "profound sensation," and the invitation to them to march through the tent, (not accepted,) was loudly applauded.

The Marshals were very inefficient; the arrangements very badly contrived and worse executed. Three hundred tickets to the Pavilion were invited to attend at 11 o'clock, and the procession was to have left the Government house earlier. Many ladies took the Committee at the word and were obliged to wait, sitting on narrow, low, hard benches crowded together, from four to five hours before the exercises commenced. After the procession arrived it was at least an hour before the assembled audience found their places. Three hours longer had the wearied women to remain before the "addresses by several gentlemen" could be heard. Maddened by hunger, some were constantly engaged in trying to force a passage out through the compact body of humanity, and turmoil and confusion were necessarily constant.

The rabble and the police seemed to be quite as bad and as little opposed to each other as those of New-York. During the exercises in the tent, the wooden fence which surrounded it was broken down, and the rabble surged in at the entrance and under the canvas walls, bursting these in some instances from the belt ropes. The police were unable to protect the audience, not merely from the uproarious interruption, but even from the danger of being crushed, and orders were once actually given by the Governor, through his aide, to bring in a detachment of military to restore order at the point of the bayonet.

On the whole I do not think the Boston people show a will more talent for holiday-keeping than the New-Yorkers—hardly as much.

But they have one advantage for holidays, as well as for all other days, which New-York will have to wait full fifty years for. The Common is wonderfully fine now. The grass, the trees, the fountains, are perfect of their kind, and there is nothing in the world finer, in its way, than the terrace promenade at the Court-house side. The Central Park will be, if Mayor WOOD shall ever get his desert, and to be same sort of thing, some twenty times as large, as the Boston Common, if the property much better laid out and planted, still it probably will never be better than the Common in the essential elements of a City play-ground. As a play-ground, I am glad to see a "caravan" of wild beasts, with the entertainment of the Belgian Giant encamped upon the parade ground of the Common; a base-ball club, suited with an admirable open field; children swimming dogs and racing yachts on the pond, and babies playing boo peep with squirrels in the trees. I would like to see cake, lemonade and Punch and Judy—anything and everything, amusing, and not positively and certainly vicious—introduced; but the Common is not large enough. If it were, and were so made use of, the Boston folks would be better than they are. I am glad to see how completely these hard, decorous Yankees refute the supposition that we should not make use of a park. I was in the London Parks every day for two months, last year, and I did not see them better used, or by a complete representation of all classes of the people, than is the Common in Boston. I have taken an observation once or twice each day for the last week, and have found it, morning and evening, giving of its health, beauty and cheerfulness, always to many hundreds of men and women, and thousands of girls and boys. Near sunset its avenues are mostly thronged; and on the holidays all parts—for it is large enough to admit the people everywhere upon the grass—were full of animated ramblers. TIFTON.

How the New-York Herald's Correspondence is Made Up—An Admirable Source for Information.

From Emerson's English Traits, Chapter XV.

The tendency in England towards social and political institutions like those of America is inevitable, and the ability of its journals is the driving force.

* * * *

The most conspicuous [illegible] Europe. What you read in the morning in that journal, you shall hear in the evening in all society. It has ears everywhere, and its information is earliest, completest and surest. It has risen year by year, and victory by victory, to its present authority.

* * * *

I asked one of its old contributors whether it had once been abler than it is now. "Never," he said; "these are its palmiest days." It has shown those qualities which are dear to Englishmen—unflinching adherence to its objects, prodigal intellectual ability, and a towering assurance, backed by a perfect organization in its printing-house, and its world-wide net-work of correspondence and reports.

It has its own history and famous trophies. In 1820 it adopted the cause of Queen CAROLINE, and carried it against the King. It adopted a poor-law system, and almost alone lifted it through. When Lord BROUGHAM was in power it decided against him, and pelted him down. It declared war against Ireland and conquered it. It dopted the League against the Corn Laws, and when COBDEN had begun to despair, it announced his triumph.

* * * *

The influence of this journal is a recognized power in Europe, and of course none are more conscious of it than its conductors. The tone of its articles has often been the occasion of comment from the official organs of the Continental Courts, and sometimes the ground of diplomatic complaint. What would the Times say? is a terror in Paris, in Berlin, in Vienna, in Copenhagen, and in Nepaul. * * * It draws from any number of skillful contributors. No writer is suffered to claim the authorship of any paper; everything good, from whatever quarter, comes out editorially. The paper thinks for the whole nation; its columns daguerreotype British ideas and British understanding. Bold but considerate, it assails alike the peasant and the prince, and not unfrequently drops a hint to Majesty itself.

LONDON, June 6, 1857.

It seems to be admitted that there is in England an inexhaustible tendency towards social and political institutions similar to those of America, and the newspaper press is the great propelling power.

* * * *

At this time the power most felt, most feared, and most obeyed in England is the press, at the head of which stands the London Times—an "institution" which wields more influence over all Europe than any of their crowned heads. The columns of the morning Times furnish topics of conversation for all society in the day; while all admit its information is the earliest, completest and surest, gathered as it is from an army of correspondents scattered and stationed throughout the globe.

* * * *

The Times is now in the zenith of its power and prosperity, the necessary result of those qualities which always secure newspaper success in this as well as in other countries—unflinching adherence to its object, prodigal intellectual ability, and a towering assurance, backed by a perfect organization of its printing establishment, and its world-wide network of correspondence and reports.

I lately had an opportunity of taking a peep into the Times office. One feels here as if he should tread lightly. He is about entering the temple whence issued the mighty power which carried the cause of Queen CAROLINE, AMELIA AUGUSTA, of BRUNSWICK, against GEORGE IV.; which caused to be adopted the poor law system; which leveled Lord BROUGHAM; waged successful war on Ireland; adopted the League against the Corn Laws, and "when CORNBAN had begun to despair, announced his triumph."

The conductors of the Times are well aware of the influence of their journal, the tone of which has been the occasion of comment from the official organs of the Continental Courts, and even the ground of diplomatic complaint. What would the Times say? is a terror in every capital in Europe. The editorial staff has always been made up of able men, and now it commands the best pens in England; but no writer is suffered to claim the authorship of any paper; everything good, from whatever quarter, comes out editorially. The paper thinks for the whole nation; its columns daguerreotype British ideas and British understanding. Bold but considerate, it assails alike the peasant and the prince, and not unfrequently drops a hint to Majesty itself.

HIGHLY IMPORTANT FROM KANSAS.

SPEECH OF GOV. WALKER AT TOPEKA.

THE ADMINISTRATION POLICY.

[OUR SPECIAL KANSAS CORRESPONDENCE.]

TOPEKA, Tuesday, June 9, 1857.

Topeka has now become doubly distinguished—first, as the place wherein was created the Constitution, so called, and second, as the place where the political disturbances which rolled that Constitution into existence have at length been settled and subsided. By far the most important meetings which have taken place since I entered the Territory, and, probably, by far the most important meetings that have occurred in Kansas at any time, were held here on Saturday last, and are now in progress to-day. On Saturday, by invitation of some of the citizens, Gov. WALKER addressed an immense audience at the place in a speech (of which I send you a printed copy reported verbatim) which was interrupted with a peculiar interest by the frankness with which he was frequently interrupted by his hearers, and the readiness and efficiency with which he replied to their numerous interrogatories. You will perceive that all the great questions of the Territory were fully discussed between them, and that each furnished the other with a candid exposition of their respective views. Having thus got rid of any possible misapprehensions as to their sentiments and wishes, it is remarkable how easily and with what rapidity the frigidity of mere party ties began to thaw. The change thus produced in the political sentiments of the bulk of the people of Topeka appears to me to be immense. Politics seem to have been completely revolutionized, and by a process at once the most practical and natural in the whole world—to wit, free discussion and honest expression of honest views.

To-day, the State Legislature, elected under the Topeka Constitution, assembled here, pursuant to adjournment, for the purpose, as believed by some, of putting the State government into full operation. Various committees had compiled a complete code of State laws, and the Legislature designed to enact those laws and put them at once into force. This, of course, would have produced immediately a direct collision between the Government of the United States and the Topeka State laws, and necessarily have embroiled Kansas again in civil war.

Simultaneously with the call for the meeting of the Legislature, a requisition has been extensively circulated throughout the Territory for a Mass Free-State Convention also to be holden in Topeka to-day. The Convention met, pursuant to the requisition, and organized this morning by the appointment of General LANE as President. Save a few speeches of no great intrinsic importance, nothing was done during the morning session, which terminated at noon. At 3 o'clock the Convention reassembled and plunged at once in medias res, by proceeding to discuss a series of resolutions submitted by a committee appointed for the purpose.

Prodigious efforts were made by the ultraists to induce the Convention to pass the amendment to the fourth resolution, proposed by Judge CONWAY, of Lawrence, providing for the immediate organization of the State Government. A most excited debate sprung up, in which nearly every leading man of the Free-State Party—ROBINSON, DELAHAY, LANE, DEITZLER, THATCHER, CONWAY, ARMY, &c., &c.—took part. CONWAY was completely floored, however. His amendment was voted down by a large majority and the original resolutions, with two or three additions, were adopted.

To save any misunderstanding, I forward you the official report of the Convention, for advanced slips of which I am indebted to the Topeka Tribune:

PROCEEDINGS OF THE FREE-STATE CONVENTION HELD AT TOPEKA, JUNE 9, 1857.

The Convention met at 10 o'clock, and was called to order by Judge CONWAY. Gen. J. H. LANE was unanimously appointed President.

On motion, W. F. M. ARMY, Judge CONWAY, M. W. DELAHAY, G. W. DEITZLER, and G. W. CUTLER were appointed a committee to recommend to the Convention the names of five persons as Vice-Presidents and two Secretaries.

The Committee reported as follows:

For Vice-Presidents: J. W. Morris, W. G. Laribee, Lyman Allen, Fielding Johnson, W. W. Ross. For Secretaries: W. F. M. Arny, T. D. Thatcher.

Which report was received and unanimously adopted.

On motion, the President appointed the following Committee to report business for the action of the Convention.

Judge Conway, M. W. Delahay, Walter Oakley, Gov. Robinson, Judge Hunt, G. W. Deitzler, Alex. J. Jamison, G. K. Holliday, J. P. Root, and Judge Smith.

The Committee asked leave to retire, which was granted, and by invitation Gen. LANE and Gov. ROBINSON addressed the Convention, after which the Convention adjourned to meet at 3 o'clock, P. M.

At 3 o'clock the Convention met, and the Committee on business made the following report:

Resolved, That the people of Kansas now, as ever, disown as invalid and of no force or effect the authority of the Territorial government as embodied in the enactments of the so-called Legislature of Kansas.

Resolved, That it is made incumbent on the people of Kansas, by the highest considerations of justice and expediency to look forward now, as ever, to their admission into the Union under the Constitution which they have already formed, as the only method of adjusting existing difficulties to which they will assent.

Resolved, That the people of Kansas will pursue with unflinching steadiness of purpose, the application now pending before the Congress of the United States, for their admission into the Union under their own Constitution, and with their own government, resting their hopes for the success thereof upon the profound conviction they feel that a measure so each only just and so accordant to the principles of past legislation in our country will eventually be conceded and sanctioned to them by the representatives of the American people.

Resolved, That the Constitution framed and adopted at Topeka had its origin in a public necessity, and the offspring of the popular will; and experience has proved the wisdom of those who framed it, and it is the duty of the Legislature and officers elected under it to complete the State organization, and keep its machinery in readiness for use so soon as we are admitted into the Union, or the necessities of the people shall require.

G. W. SMITH, G. K. HOLLIDAY,
G. W. DEITZLER, G. ROBINSON,
J. P. ROOT, MORRIS HUNT,
A. A. JAMISON, M. W. DELAHAY,
WALTER OAKLEY.

Judge CONWAY dissented from the report, and offered the following as a substitute for the fifth resolution:

Resolved, That while we disclaim any intention to employ force to maintain the authority of our Government, we do now recommend to the people of Kansas that they, voluntarily, peacefully and universally accept, as their only rightful Government; and act in all things with and up to the Government established under the Topeka Constitution; that they should look to it exclusively to extend protection to individual rights and to regulate all the relations of society; and that they should refer all their personal controversies to its judicial tribunals for adjudication and settlement, and should scrupulously abide the decisions of the same; that they should in fine adopt it in all its details, and the business of every day life, and everywhere respect its legislation as binding upon them; and for official fidelity as entitled to their obedience; to the end that the aforesaid Government shall become the living Government of the community.

Resolved, That in order to enable the people to accomplish this object, the Legislature under the State Constitution now in session at this place, in the opinion of this Convention, should proceed to complete the organization of the State Government so far as that work constitutes part of its Legislative duty—first, by establishing counties throughout the State, and providing for the form of government for the same. Secondly, by providing for the incorporation of towns throughout the State, including forms of government for the same; and by the enactment of all laws whatsoever which may be necessary to the complete development of the forms of the government to that point at which they may be taken hold of by the people in all their local departments and made the fundamental rule of government.

The substitute, after considerable discussion by Judge CONWAY, WM. PHILLIPS, CHARLES F. W. LEONHARDT and W. F. M. ARMY, in favor of the substitute, and Col. DELAHAY, Governor C. ROBINSON, Judge SMITH, General LANE, T. D. THATCHER, J. M. WALDEN and J. W. MORRIS, against the substitute, was submitted to the vote of the Convention. The President could not decide by the sound, and a division of the Convention was had—the substitute lost. The original resolution was then amended on motion of Mr. ARMY, by striking out the words "the admission [illegible] majority was unanimously adopted.

The Committee reported the following which was also adopted:

Whereas, By public legislation by the Legislature "Legislative Assembly," and the passage of resolutions under the act providing for a call of a Convention under the Constitution, has excluded a large majority of the voters of Kansas from a participation in the election of delegates to said Convention; therefore,

Resolved, That this Convention respectfully and earnestly recommend to the Free-State party of Kansas that the election for delegates to the Legislature of the law enacted by the Legislature begun Lecompton, be disregarded and permitted to pass without any participation therein by the Free-State party of Kansas.

On motion, it was unanimously

Resolved, That since the forces of the past have been sufficient to develop the sterling principles of every man in Kansas, therefore we repeat any pledge to the citizens which our opponents in the other place have made to become a candidate for the Legislative Convention, or a candidate for the same, is inconsistent with the independence of Free-State men, and should be regarded with suspicion and jealousy.

After which the Convention adjourned sine die.

J. H. LANE, President.

W. F. M. ARMY, }
T. D. THATCHER, } Secretaries.

That the Legislature will pursue a course substantially the same is now a matter of certainty. To-morrow they will meet, and, under the influence of honest counsels and a decent policy, will adjourn without taking any action calculated to lead to collision with the Federal Government or agitation.

About 8 o'clock in the evening, when the Convention had broken up, the crowd proceeded on invitation to Governor WALKER's lodgings at the Gurney House, and for repeated calls, succeeded in bringing him forward to address them. He appeared, amid the cheers of the assembled multitude, and in a calm, conciliatory speech, in which he gave general assurance of peace and protection to all parties, and in a different application made by him to the President of the Territory of Kansas. At the earnest request of the President of the United States I consented to come here and occupy the position of Governor of Kansas. I do not deny that my name was in nomination. I have not sought this position. On the contrary I have accepted it, and, I am free to say, with great diffidence, yet with the conviction that, by the blessing of God, I can do some good in this Territory, by a faithful execution of the laws, and by a faithful adherence to the principles of the Constitution of the United States, and all his Cabinet, that the President, and the people of this beautiful Territory of yours, and that of the whole Union, are to be the gainers, instead of the difficult and exciting questions which have heretofore introduced civil war and discord throughout your borders.

When, therefore, the matter was presented to me in that light by the President of the United States and all his Cabinet, I felt called on, notwithstanding my deep sense of the responsibility which I was required to assume, to withdraw my declination of this office, and accept the proffered trust. I am now here this day, then, fellow-citizens, to address you upon those grave and momentous questions which concern so much not only your own peace and prosperity, but that of the whole Union.

And here permit me to say, that it has been my lot to have traveled through every State in this Union except California, and I must say that I have never seen, anywhere, any region for which God has done so much as the Territory of Kansas. (Cheers.) All that you want is peace and prosperity, the recognition of the principle that the people of Kansas alone can rule here, and its exercise in connection with all the great questions which have disturbed the quiet and harmony of this Territory, in order to make not only the town of Topeka one of the most prosperous of the Territory and of the Union, but to make Kansas soon, at the proper period, to become a sovereign State, one of the most important and flourishing of the whole confederacy.

Constitution and introduce such social institutions as the majority prefer. But how is this to be done? The Congress of the United States has established the Kansas Territory, and has made provision for its government. It has also established a Territorial Legislature, and that action is through the Territorial Legislature.

Now, none of you can regret more than I do any of those unfortunate occurrences and events which have taken place in the past. For myself, I wish to contribute the past and look forward to a better and brighter future. That Territorial Legislature has, in respect to the authority over the question, been recognized by the acts of Congress of 1854 and 1857. That Legislature has called a Convention to assemble in September next. That Convention they will or they will not submit to the vote of the majority of the bona fide actual resident settlers of Kansas. If they do not submit it, I will be with you, fellow-citizens, in united opposition to their course. [Cries of "Good."] I cannot doubt, gentlemen, that if the Chief Magistrate of the Union will join you in opposition. But, gentlemen, I cannot doubt that that Convention will submit such an instrument as they may frame, for the adjudicated rejection of the whole people of Kansas. Then, at that time, and in pursuance of the method designed by the laws of your country, by the intermediate of the Chief Magistrate of the Union, who was placed there by the people and sworn by them to execute the laws, if the Convention doubts both the will of the Territory will submit to the whole of the then bona fide resident settlers of Kansas, the determination of the whole, by a majority of the whole people, shall adopt or reject that Constitution. If they reject it, there is an end of that Convention. It has performed its office. It has disappeared never to meet again. [A Voice—"What then?] What next, you ask, gentlemen? There are two other ways exits from the dilemma, and as the question is a practical one, I propose to answer it. In October next, and at the same time as the late Territorial Legislature, but under the laws of Congress, you, the whole people of Kansas, have a right to elect a delegate to Congress, and to elect a Territorial Legislature. Now, if the Convention shall refuse to submit a new Constitution to submit a new Constitution, or, if it shall submit it, and the people of Kansas, by a majority of the people, reject it, then, I say, the people, by the mode given for four or more called Conventions, as claimed by yourselves, was not 1,731, whereas there are now registered over 10,000 votes, residents here on the 10th of March last, exclusive of the thousands resident or who have arrived here since that date. The people! Do you mean to tell me that 1,731 votes constitute the whole number of voters in the Territory of Kansas? [A vote.]—"That was a year ago, sir." But should those 1,731 votes in a year ago, or at any time, impose a Constitution for all time to exist upon the present people of Kansas? [A voice—"Not against their will." Should the constitution be submitted to their will or adoption, or not? [A voice.] "Yes." That, gentlemen, is the great question, so far as they are concerned. But I understand you claim to be a State now, and that your so-called Legislature, chosen by a small number of votes, or none, meets next week to assume laws to be enforced in Kansas. This miserable minority, constituting not one-tenth of the present people of Kansas, propose, in absolute defiance of the acts of Congress, and in open rebellion, mark you, gentlemen, not only against the Territorial laws, but against the laws and Government of the United States, to assume to have, and, representing 1,731 people, impose the constitution, by force, upon the people of Kansas by the enactment of laws. [A voice—"Where are those 10,000 voters that are not on the record?"] Some inadvertently omitted, many who would not register, and who have arrived since the 10th of March last. As regards registry, however, I may tell you that it is of comparatively little consequence, if the Constitution be submitted to the whole people.

It may suit the purposes of faction to ask such questions by those who refused to register, but the whole country know that the Constitution can be of no force or effectiveness if it be submitted to the vote of the people, and it is no submitted to is for them to determine whether they will adopt it or not. But here assume a body of men acting in defiance of the laws of Congress, and in open rebellion against the Government of the United States, representing, according to their own statement, less than one-tenth of the people of Kansas, who come forward and say that the people round Fall shall not decide this question! That neither you nor I, nor any of our fellow-citizens elsewhere throughout the Territory shall have the right to determine whether we shall accept the new Constitution or reject it!

Gentlemen, I come here for purposes of peace and reconciliation. I come here to inaugurate the rule of law, of justice and of the whole people of Kansas by giving them all an opportunity of adopting their own Constitution instead of allowing a handful of 1,731 men to thrust a Constitution on them, by adopting a code of laws for Kansas that shall be a mockery and a delusion. I repeat that I come here for the purpose of reconciling and perpetuating peace, but I tell you candidly that my instructions and my oath of office require me to put down the execution of such laws, and for the good of the people of Kansas, they must and will be put down. [Cries of "Never, never." A Voice—"Do not the people of the United States say that these laws are right?"] The people of the United States have just elected a President who declares that such laws would be unconstitutional, null and void. [A Voice—"Who cares for that?"] The people of the United States have just elected a majority to Congress who entertain the same opinion with him. This is a matter involving the peace, happiness and prosperity of the whole people. Your towns will advance in importance and wealth, your business will increase in value, harmony and good will reign throughout the Territory if the people who are now here and who will be here in November or December next will only decide for themselves what shall be their own form of government, and their own social institutions. But what is it this Legislature proposes to do? Without the slightest necessity, without the slightest pretext or apology under the mode of adjustment now proposed, I speak not now as a partisan, but I wish to God that you, and I, and all of us could rub out the past. [A voice.—"It can not be done." Another voice—"Run out the bogus laws."] Rub them out, gentlemen, if you please, by a vote of the people. [A voice—"We cannot get that."] You can get that. [A voice—"Give us a fair chance the next election."] You will get that. At the next election in October, when you elect the Territorial Legislature, you can repeal those laws, and you can then also, by a majority of your own votes, adopt or reject the Constitution presented for your consideration next Fall. Now, what, I ask again, is proposed to be done by this Legislature? It is proposed to put in operation a body of laws. But you must remember the passage of laws is no force; it is not a banking. [A voice—"It has been here."] A law is a command, it exists obedience from the whole people, and is to be actually put in force in the Territory. What is the consequence? Why you then place the Government of the United States in positive collision between that Legislature and the Government of the United States. There are two sets of laws then to govern you. Every man's contract, every man's title, every man's possession will then be involved in difficulty, and, in the course of three or four months you will have a large importation of lawyers. [A voice—"We have plenty of them now."—laughter.] It will involve you in endless litigation, from which there will be no possible extrication. Now, gentlemen, is there any necessity for this? [A voice—"None—not a bit—there never was."] Can you not peacefully decide this question in the mode pointed out by the act of Congress, if, as you can and will have, a full opportunity of recording your vote. [A voice—"Why have we not had it?"] Gentlemen, I was not Governor of Kansas and Mr. Buchanan was not President of the United States. [A voice—"How can we be sure of that?"] You will get it by the Convention submitting the Constitution to the vote of the whole people. [A voice—"Who is to elect the Convention?" "Divide the grand question."] Gentlemen, it is a constitutional point by which the Constitution is to be submitted. Do let us run away after shadows. Decide not to register and then say you could vote. The great substantial point is this: Will the whole people of Kansas, next Fall, by a fair election, impartially and fairly conducted, by impartial judges, have an opportunity to decide for themselves what shall be their form of government and what shall be their social institutions? I say they will, but I go a step further. [A voice—"Have you the power?"] I have not the power to bring it about; if the Convention will not do it, I will join you in lawful opposition to their proceedings. [Cries of "good, good." A voice—"Would hold you to your promise." An other voice—"How are we to vote for this here Convention?" Another voice—"Nothing can be asked fairer than what he says."] Well, gentlemen, I have no power to repeal the laws that have been passed in reference to the Convention, and if those laws have not been fairly executed it is simply no fault of mine. [A voice—"Has not James Buchanan power to repeal those laws?" Another voice—"Hasn't he sanctioned them?"] He has had nothing to do with them, but the Congress of the United States has authorized the Territorial Legislature to pass laws. The President of the United States has taken an oath to carry the laws into effect, and it is for you, if you are opposed to those laws, through the people's vote, to repeal them. [A voice—"We cannot get at them."] There is not the least difficulty about your getting at them. [A voice—"Keep out Missouri and we will do well enough."] Well, gentlemen, I pledge myself to you that, so far as my power is concerned—and I do not think that you are not in any event to have related from the sins of the past—but so far as my power is concerned I pledge myself that the people of Kansas, and of Kansas alone, and not the people of Missouri or of Massachusetts, or of any other State, shall interfere even by one single vote to decide for the people of Kansas what shall be their institution. [A voice—"That is my doctrine." Cries of "Good, good."] But, gentlemen, they shall decide it for themselves. When these views of mine are not carried into effect—when you see that you will not have a full and fair opportunity to decide for yourselves what shall be your form of government and your social institutions, it will still be time enough to complain of me, but not till then. [Several voices—"That is right." Another voice—"What about the bogus laws?"] And now I am asked what about the bogus laws? Why, your very Governor, Mr. Reeder, has acknowledged these bogus laws by putting into office a gentleman elected by that bogus Legislature, and we have many of you and nearly all the people of Kansas. And if the bogus Legislature has power to pass charters, it has power to pass any other law not in conflict with the Constitution of the United States. [A voice—"How are there Inspectors to be appointed?"] They must be appointed fairly and impartially, of course. [A voice—"Who is to appoint them?"] I doubt not that the Convention will prescribe a fair, just and impartial method, as they do in other States. [A voice—"They did, in giving us two hundred and eighty voters in this county."—laughter.] Well, gentlemen, let us look at that question. What have these two hundred and eighty voters to do, if you have all a fair vote next Fall on the Constitution? [A voice—"There has been no census taken."] That has nothing on earth to do with the question. But whilst I must deeply regret and deplore the circumstance that there has been an insufficient census, what am I to think when told by those who profess to represent the Republican Party of this Territory, that tell you that you should neither register or vote? You were kept from registering, as you all know, by following the advice of these party leaders of yours, and then complain they cannot vote. You could have registered here if you pleased, and hundreds in this Territory, since hearing my plan, have expressed to me their deep regret that they had not registered, and many of your county since my arrival have changed their position and resolved to vote. Every man who responds that he will not acknowledge these laws has been deprived of no privilege in not being registered, because he could have been registered or not as he will not vote. If you dislike the Convention, do you think oppose it by standing aloof and allowing a majority of other persons to adopt their Constitution, or by voting down that instrument? If you do not vote next Fall for or against that instrument, when you have a fair chance, Congress will say to themselves, you had. No, you cannot defeat the Constitution by refusing to vote. [A voice—"The Governor is right, and we will vote there."] Now, gentlemen, I really believe I have detained you too long. There is nothing on earth that I love more than free opinion, free press and popular discussion. [Cries of "right."] Instead of objecting to it I love to hear some few of you differ from me or ask questions. Come let us reason together. Dismiss all prejudice and prejudiced regrets, and as you can do so, all the admonitions that have occurred in the past, let us set out together the great practical question. What is best for the growth future of Kansas? [A voice—"The Topeka Constitution."] Well, gentlemen, I hope no one will say an Union man who believes that 1,731 voters should deprive some 30,000 or 40,000 voters now in the Territory or that soon will be here of deciding their own form of government for themselves.

[A Voice—"How was it with the people of Missouri? came here?"] I have nothing to do with the people of either Missouri or Massachusetts. I am only looking to the future. And I say if you desire union (cries of "No, no"—if you desire union; [Cries of "No, no!" if you desire to either into secession, but against the Territorial laws only, but against the Government of the United States, ["No, no,"] all you have to do is to set up the State Government against the Government approved by the President and the acts of Congress by the present enactment of State laws. [A voice—"Not now."] There cannot be a State Government without a State Governor, without his superseding the Governor appointed by the President of the United States under the laws of Congress. There cannot be a State Government without State Judges, and there cannot be State Judges without their superseding the Judges appointed by the President of the United States, under the laws of Congress, or a State Legislature, without superseding the Territorial Legislature. It means that, or it means nothing. Surely this is open rebellion against the Government of the United States, to which you tell me you do not mean to resort.

Now then, gentlemen, I return you my most sincere thanks for the kind and indulgent attention with which you have listened to my remarks.

[A Voice—What as to the taxes?]

Long before I am called on for any official action, the reign of law, of justice and of the people will be so fully established here that, as good citizens, you will all cheerfully pay the small pittance to support your own Government.

[A Voice—"We will have a great deal more confidence in the vote of the people to be given next Fall if you will tell us by what authority the Judges are to be appointed."]

I will answer that question, for I have no doubt it is fairly asked and in a fair spirit.

[The Voice—It certainly is.]

I will say then to you, gentlemen, that if they do not appoint a fair and impartial mode by which the majority of the actual, bona fide resident settlers of Kansas shall vote, through the instrumentality of impartial judges, I will join you all in lawful opposition to their doings, and the President and Congress will reject their Constitution. [A Voice—"Will the Convention appoint impartial judges?"] It is their duty to do so. [A Voice—"Will they do so?"] Gentlemen, I am not the Convention, but I do not doubt they will give you impartial judges. [A Voice—I will ask the "Gov-

[illegible] over the future I have; and I say to you, that unless a full and fair opportunity is given to the whole people of Kansas to decide for themselves what shall be their form of Government, including the great sectional question which has so long divided you—unless, I repeat, they grant you such an opportunity, I have one power of which no man or set of men can deprive me, and to which I shall unhesitatingly resort, and that is, to join you in lawful opposition to their acts. [Cries of "Good, good," and loud applause, during which the Governor withdrew.]

POSTSCRIPT.—Wednesday, June 10.

To-day, the Governor; Mr. Stanton, the Territorial Secretary; Mr. Preston, of Tennessee, and Mr. Delahay, of the Wyandotte Register, addressed an audience of about 300 persons at Big Spring.

The speeches of these gentlemen were received, if not enthusiastically, at least favorably.

Gen. Jim Lane replied to the Governor and Mr. Stanton. He declared it to be the intention of the Free State party to submit the Topeka Constitution, as opposed to that which is to be formed by the Convention assembled under the provisions of the Territorial Legislature, or, as he called it, the Bogus Legislature—(though that is a matter on which the difference of opinion is immense)—he declared, I say, that it was the intention of his party to submit that Constitution to the people in August next. The gist of his speech may be gathered from the resolutions adopted at the Mass Convention. The General's remarks were received with frequent applause from a portion of his audience. The meeting did not disperse finally until 7 o'clock P. M. P. H. C.

Message of Charles Robinson, Delivered at Topeka, June 11, 1857.

Fellow-Citizens of the Senate and House of Representatives:

You are again convened together at the expiration of the recess taken by you in January last. You meet under circumstances scarcely less difficult, and no less embarrassing, than have characterized the previous meetings of the Legislature. But your duties under the Constitution are plain, and the necessity for action imperative.

As the representatives of the people, you are here to do the work for which they selected you. The bitter experience of the past has brought nothing with it that could relieve you of your responsibility. Every step in that experience has shown the necessity for you to do your work, and that you, with calmness, wisdom and determination prepare those bulwarks on which the people may rest their constitutional rights, as American citizens, and keep the State Government in readiness for admission into the Union.

As it becomes my duty to recommend such measures as I may deem expedient for your action, and to communicate to you the condition of affairs in the State, I shall endeavor briefly to do so.

Since I sent my message to you, when first convened in March, 1856, many important and startling events have marked and disturbed the current of affairs. The horrors of actual warfare have existed in our midst. Towns and cities have been sacked and burned, and our citizens have been brutally murdered on the highways and in their homes. A hostile enemy on our Eastern border has poured in predatory band after band, and army after army, with the design of harassing our citizens, and completing the subjugation they had begun.

The General Government, which still assumes the power of protection over us, has barely used that power as the screen under which it has rendered aid and comfort to our enemies, and strengthened the hands of those foreign invaders who still pretend to hold the political power of the people, which they usurped. Nor have your labors or your persons been exempt. Lawless arrests have been made of your members, and also of Executive Officers, by men who, although they possessed some power, and in many instances, held positions in connection with the Federal Courts, acted with irregularity and in defiance of even the rules which they professed to respect.

A large and necessary portion of the labors of your codifying committee was destroyed, with much other property at Lawrence, in May, 1856, when that place was pillaged and partly burned by a mob brought there by a United States Marshal. When your bodies met pursuant to adjournment, in July last, your Assembly was broken up by a large force of United States troops, in battle array, who drove you hence in gross violation of those constitutional rights which it was their duty to have protected. When you again convened in January last, at your regular session, your proceedings were interfered with by a Deputy Marshal, and many of your members arrested.

I do not propose entering into a minute detail of all the unhappy occurrences that have marked the past year—occurrences which have stamped a page of infamy on the history of the country. Let me refer you to the comprehensive address prepared by a committee of the convention that assembled in this place on the 10th of March last, for those particulars, an enumeration of which would absorb too much of your time. Suffice it to say, that owing to these causes the State Government is not fully organized, and waits in urgent necessity for the completion of your work.

The period for which you were elected is drawing to a close. No provision for taking the census have been made, and no election law adopted. Without there, your function in the government will expire, and with it the power of reproducing it. I cannot think that you will, in any contingency incur the reproach of leaving helpless the people who trusted you, or compelling them to wear through original action to their primary power, for those needed steps which it is your duty to supply.

In my message sent to you in March, 1856, I enumerated the outlines of the legislation it would be incumbent on you to frame and adopt. Let me respectfully refer you to that document for those details.

There is one subject of great moment for our present and future prosperity. The public land in our midst still belongs to the General Government. To secure these lands, or all of them that can be obtained, is a matter to which we should devote no ordinary attention. The policy hitherto adopted towards other new States gives us just grounds to look to Congress for a grant of all the public lands in our midst. To your enterprise and endurance its value can be traced, and to you it rightly belongs. The sale of much of our most valuable lands for the behalf of the Indians, give an additional claim on the Government for the remainder. Surely the General Government will not seek to make a speculation on the bones and sinews of the struggling pioneers, who seek to add another State to the confederacy. Let us respectfully urge upon the assembled wisdom of Congress our claim for donations of these lands, and let us press these claims before the Government has passed the title to all the valuable portions into the hands of speculators. No donation should, by its terms, conflict with the claim of a squatter on the soil.

The inestimable frame-work of a Territorial Government still exists in Kansas. While the popular branch of Congress has accepted our application for admission into the Union, the Senate has still withheld its approval. In this legislated condition, our rights as American citizens, under the Constitution, and our inherent rights, as men remain to us. The Territorial Governor, recently sent among us by the Federal Government, in his inaugural, has fully said:

"If the people of Kansas, who, in forming their State Constitution, are to declare the terms on which they propose to enter the Union, Congress cannot compel the people of Kansas to adopt any other conditions than those without their consent, the Constitution framed by the people, Congress, it is true, may for constitutional reasons refuse admission, but the State alone, in forming her Constitution, can prescribe the terms on which she will enter the Union. The power of the people of a Territory to form a State Constitution, for the purpose, especially in the United States, carved out of the public domain. Nearly all the lands of Kansas are public lands, and most of them are occupied by Indian tribes. These lands are the property of the Federal Government, but their right is exclusively that of a proprietor, carrying with it no political power."

The doctrine here enunciated is only what has been established by precedent, and reiterated time and again. In it we have a right to form a State Constitution, and of necessity the complete State organization, for which its specific terms must provide. As Congress has neither the right to frame a Constitution for us, nor to "change" the same, it must be apparent to all that they have no more power to destroy it when created. Governor Walker goes even further than this, and further than we ever proposed going, for he says that "the State alone, in forming a Constitution, can prescribe the terms on which she will enter the Union," clearly implying that she may enter the Union or not. Under these circumstances, it is clearly apparent that the Federal Government has only sent Gov. Walker as a Territorial officer to Kansas, because we have hitherto failed or been unable to complete the organization we have begun. In the absence of the full and vital powers of government adopted by the people, this is merely an endeavor to carry out the implied protection.

What renders this more unhappy is the fact that the Federal authorities have never yet been able to afford us such protection, and as there is no Territorial law here, recognized by the people as such, the executive function is a mockery.

Your first consideration is the necessities of the people, but beyond that it is your duty to act with promptness, so as to relieve these Federal appointees of a merely nominal duty, that must be embarrassing and disrespectful to them, while the unsettled state of affairs conveys an impressive reproach to those Republican institutions on which all our hopes as a people centre. In the Inaugural to which I have referred, there is a recommendation that our people forsake the governments they have adopted, and under the management of peripatetic presiding officials, seek to do over again what has been done.

We do not think that any serious or generally entertained desire exists among our people to do so, and, while opinions from such a source may be justled to respect, it is at least unfortunate that a course of action in relation to the Constitution, should be pointed out in the official address of a Federal appointee, who, in that very address, urges the right of the people, and their right alone, to take steps for a State government. It is as clearly evident from that address itself, that Gov. Walker has not been sufficiently conversant with affairs in Kansas, to warrant the expression of opinion on so grave a matter. In that document he assures us that we shall have everything over which his Executive function has no control, and refrains from expressing any opinion on the only points for which we could entertain hopes of his action. You are doubtless aware that Acting-Territorial Gov. Stanton issued a proclamation containing an apportionment of representation for a Delegate Convention. That apportionment leaves nearly one half of Kansas without any representation, and as no census has been taken there by any one, they will, of course, have no privilege of even voting.

Had there been no State Constitution in Kansas, had a fraudulent, pretended Territorial Legislature never originated the steps to which this Inaugural refers, had that action come simply from the people as it legitimately should, there would still have been the strongest reasons why all good men should refrain from participating in an act so grossly fraudulent and despotic as this pretended census, and partial apportionment under it. In any event, such proceedings will inevitably fail to the danger as lacking in that great essential, the popular will, which alone could give it validity.

Although that strange appointment which deliberately anticipates disfranchising one half of the people, was issued a week previous to the Inaugural of Governor Walker, there was not the slightest allusion to it in that document. And yet the evidence of the fact was of easy access to him, and he was not ignorant of it. What does he mean when he says, "the law has performed its entire appropriate function when it extends to the people the right of suffrage."

Has it done so? or, is Governor Walker ignorant of the fact that it has not? He adds:

"Throughout our whole Union, however, and wherever free government prevails, those who abstain from the exercise of the right of suffrage, authorize those who do vote to act for them in that contingency, and the absentees are as much bound under the law and Constitution, where there is no fraud or violence, by the act of the majority of those who do vote, as though all had participated in the election."

It would be needless to tell you that such a position, however good, is quite inapplicable to this so called census law, and all the proceedings under it. It originates in an usurping fraud. It is not a proposed election to ascertain the wishes of the people, but a foregone conclusion, every part of which is carefully framed to accomplish a certain result. But if its applicability cannot be found in these proceedings, let me suggest where it can be applied. In the proceedings under which the State Constitution was framed and ratified, all the actual voters had the privilege of participating. Men of all parties did do so, and if any portion declined, it was because they feared to hazard the policy they were trying to thrust on Kansas to a popular vote.

How are we to reconcile the two positions of this Federal inaugural—first, that the people alone must freely and fairly make or change their Constitution, and secondly, that "the Territorial Legislature is the power ordained for this purpose by the United States, and in opposing it you oppose the authority of the Federal Government."

Well knowing that the complaint that the Legislature referred to did not derive its power from the people of Kansas, he makes up for its lack of popular legitimacy thus: "That Legislature was called into being by the Congress of 1854, and is recognised in the very latest Congressional legislation. It is recognized by the present Chief Magistrate of the Union."

There is not much of "popular sovereignty" and "self government" here. This usurpation is repudiated by the people, but it is recognized by "Congress" and the "President." Its pretended enactments are a dead letter. All the official proclamations and bulletins of Presidents and Territorial Governors cannot make them law; for nothing is law or can have the authority thereof, save the legitimately expressed will of the people. But if the Federal authorities cannot make their usurpations laws, they seem bent on preventing the people from having any law unless they will stoop to accept of this. Never let it be said that the people of Kansas were so recreant to the principles of self government as to accept the laws thrown upon them by a body of invaders. Such a fatal precedent would sow the seed that would spring up to the ultimate ruin of our Government. An insignificant minority in Kansas may cooperate with the invaders outside to perpetuate this usurpation, but as Gov. Walker says: "The minority, in resisting the will of the majority, may involve Kansas again in civil war; they may bring upon her reproach and obloquy, and destroy her progress and prosperity; they may keep her for years out of the Union, and, in the whirlwind of agitation, sweep away the Government itself; but Kansas can never be brought into the Union with or without Slavery, except by a previous solemn decision, fully, freely and fairly made by a majority of her people in voting for or against the adoption of her State Constitution."

This has been done in the adoption of our State Constitution—has been done in accordance with the very principles and requirements of this inaugural itself, and we may well ask, in the language of Gov. Walker, "Why, then, should this just, peaceful, and constitutional mode of settlement meet with such opposition from any quarter?"

I cannot dismiss this inaugural, sent among us by the federal authorities and Territorial Governor, without noticing one or two other points. He says there is a clause in our Constitution forever excluding the African race, bond or free, from Kansas. There is no such clause in our Constitution, and it is to be regretted that Gov. Walker, who talks so much about the "will of the people," should not have given a Constitution emanating from them a more careful investigation. At the time the Constitution was submitted to the people, a resolution from the people to the first Legislature was also submitted. This was neither "in" nor connected with the Constitution, and has just as much force as the first Legislature may choose to attach to it. It originated in an earnestness desire to show favor to the peculiar institutions of "her sister States"—especially her immediate neighbor, the State of Missouri. And how has this compromise spirit been met? By invasion, usurpation, rapine, fire and sword. Such clauses as that which he has sarcastically said were in our Constitution, he expressly denies, in another paragraph, to be in it.

How much more deeply must he feel the interests of Missouri than Kansas, is apparent when he recalls the debt of gratitude that the people of Kansas owe that State which has stripped our people of every Constitutional right, has involved us in the confusion of civil discord, and which is trying by the aid of General Government to place its feet upon our neck to-day. The first cause of a political struggle in Kansas was whether Kansas should be a free or slave State. After the invasion of 1855's still more fearful question arose whether the people of Kansas should have a right to govern themselves. It is for this we struggle. The rights of the people, the glory of Republicanism on earth, the integrity of our Government are all wrapt up in the issue. Truly we can say, "never was so momentous a question submitted to the decision of any people, and we cannot avoid the alternatives now before us of glory or of shame."

The rights of a free people we love, the Union we regard, the integrity of the Government we will maintain. The devotion of the people of Kansas to the Union is evidenced by the stern reality of their sufferings and their endurance. In wisdom and devotion the people of Kansas will struggle to preserve the Union should they ever be permitted to enjoy the bonds of statehood, they will do so by endeavoring to make the Union worth preserving, without which it will inevitably crumble in pieces. We may with sad I place hand near from the tomb of Washington or Jefferson some perishable relic of the mortality of those who while living, were devoted to liberty and reverenced the claims of God and humanity and under the cover of the awe-striking symbol, incite the reluctant representatives of the people to acts disfranchising American citizens, robbing Republicanism of all that is good in it. We may shout "the Union," "the Union," over acts of the most reckless despotism, and hurry our Government into oligarchy and anarchy under the delusion, but the delusion will not save us from the penalty of our folly and our crime.

Let us then preserve the Union by maintaining the integrity of Republicanism.

It is an universal maxim that usurpers never voluntarily relinquish their power. Under whatever guise it may come, the action of those who now pretend to hold territorial power, will be for the continuation of that power.

For Gov. Walker to urge us into that flimsy trap in which they hope to ensnare our people is wrong; and to talk to us in that connection of fairness and justice is to add insult to wrong.

While the great principle for which we have to contend, is to maintain our right to self government, the second consideration of preserving Kansas a Free State is not to be lost sight of. It is of importance that the principles of Freedom should prevail, not only because the people have willed it, but because it is good policy, and above all because it is right. Where would be our prosperity if slavery were entailed upon us? Where would the towns and cities, the railroads and the commerce be, with such a plague spot on our energies? The owls would hoot through the cities now laid out in Kansas, the railroads be confined to charters of usurped legislation.

The industrious settler would shrink from the contamination of slave labor that would degrade his manhood and his honest toil. Nor can we trace all the reasons by which the unerring finger of a just Providence guides the policy of every systematic wrong to a sure decay, and entails the curse that there should be no prosperity in the land that is stained by the tears and watered by the unpaid sweat of any portion of the children of man.

There is indeed an "isothermal line" and a law of the thermometer which may make slave labor comparatively profitable or unprofitable," but there is unhappily no "law of the thermometer" to prevent infatuated Slavery propagandists from attempting to establish the institution, where wise policy says it never should be. It will therefore be an important duty in us to guard carefully against all the steps in such an institution design; the more so that "policy" and an "isothermal law" are united with the claims of Republicanism and justice.

Under these circumstances we can contemplate the duties before us, and with judicious calmness undertake them. We struggle for our birthright, and we must not sell it for a "mess of pottage." The eyes of the country are on us, for our cause is the common cause of all who love Republicanism. In our defeat the principle on which the Government rests will sustain a shock; in our victory it will take root and be perpetuated. To you is confided no common share of the task. To you will be meted no common share of the glory of victory or the misfortune of defeat. Be true and we shall triumph. Our task is difficult, let us meet its responsibilities in full reliance on the Wisdom of Him who is the God of Justice. A future of prosperity and usefulness is before the people of Kansas. A great State is rapidly expanding into prosperous existence. May we hope to establish in it a Government not unworthy of this civilized age and our Republican institutions.

NEBRASKA.

Condition of Affairs in the Territory.

Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times.

Omaha, Nebraska Territory, May 29, 1857.

The steamer Florence arrived here 10-day from Fort Randall, some four hundred miles above this place. She brings down a company of three agents for the American Fur Company, who left the Territory of Washington in March, came over the Rocky Mountains to Fort Benton, eighteen hundred miles above here, where they took a skiff down the Missouri River till they met the Florence at Fort Randall. They report very cold weather in that far-off country, with an abundance of snow and ice. They had no trouble with the Indians, and report them as generally peaceable and quiet, except at Fort Pierre, where they are rather impudent and restless. They believe there will be no very serious trouble in that direction at present.

The mania for land speculations and town shares is now at its height, and while you are trembling with apprehension for a disastrous result, we are reckoning on regardless of any future except such as shall yield its thousands of per cent. upon our hopeful investments.

Nebraska, though rich in her agricultural elements, is poor in the actual products of her soil; and though honest farm labor would be abundantly profitable, yet almost every one seems to leave Agriculture and take to the manufacture of fancy towns and embryo cities, believing that every "claim" can be staked and plotted and its many corner lots be made into sudden fortunes. The consequence is, provisions of every sort are high and have to be imported, while City Scrip is a drug in market and can only be disposed of by exportation. The plateau upon which lies Omaha is seven miles long, yet it is all laid out into town lots, commencing with South Omaha and continuing on through the several distinctions of Omaha City, Scrip Town, Saratoga and Florence, and the holder of each lot enjoys the prospective fortune which the future imaginative population of several hundred thousand will be sure to yield.

But the prospects of Omaha never were brighter to one whose anticipations have not been of the very brilliant order. Here will grow up steadily and naturally a city of importance, but of what population and in what time, the development of the country about it alone will determine.

The enterprise of man may do much to build up a town, but it must be aided by natural advantages of considerable importance, else it cannot largely succeed; and if the advantages claimed for Omaha shall really be secured to her, she will take rank with the cities of 20,000 or 30,000, within the coming ten years. Building of every description goes on as rapidly as the supply of material will admit, and it is safe to say she will double her importance this Summer. Lots are held at $75 per foot, and claims within five miles of the city, in cases where Government title is obtained, cannot be bought for less than $10 to $15 per acre. Emigration, chiefly from the East, is coming in rapidly, and prices are advancing, though not as fast as in Kansas. The character of this emigration is good, it coming chiefly from the East—New-York taking the lead—Pennsylvania, Ohio, and Michigan coming next. Those who have come this season have come more to settle and improve the country, than to speculate out of, and prove a curse to, it. For the former there is an abundance of room, and their honest, faithful labor will bring an abundant reward.

Your readers should beware how they purchase Nebraska property from strangers. I know of an instance in which a stranger showed to members of a prominent wholesale dry goods house in Philadelphia very pretty plots of the two towns, Hudson and Melrose, which were represented as opposite one another, on the Missouri River, fifty miles above here, and at the western terminus of the Iowa Central Railroad. On the strength of these representations, thirty deeds of choice and valuable corner lots in these fictitious embryo cities were made out and delivered at a dollar each to the hopeful parties, but unfortunately for them, there are no such towns, and the Iowa Central Railroad is not yet located within 200 miles of the Missouri. Other similar swindles have been successfully consummated, and Nebraska is not free herself from suffering at the hands of sharpers; for a few weeks ago a man claiming to be a large operator in Wisconsin bought some seven or eight thousand dollars worth of real estate for which he paid his sight drafts on Milwaukee. Now sight drafts on Milwaukee are desirable in certain cases, but in this instance, after the transfers were made and the liberal purchaser had liberal time to leave the city, these drafts began to come back condemned as forgeries, and the triumph of duplicity was complete.

I was at Florence a day or two ago, and witnessed the operations of Lynch law at the hands of a Claim club. Three or four claims had been jumped, and the jumpers were tried, convicted and sentenced. In the crowd were some half dozen pistols, and when, armed with revolvers, the officers of the law, who, unarmed, executed, if any resistance, demanded, it would be stated there would be a serious affair; that the Short-Horns were around, and would defend the jumpers. Immediately one of the crowd took the stand, and announced that, as sentence had been passed upon the convicted ones, he would be one of any number of companions to arrest and try any person who should undertake to resist the execution of law, to which some thirty men responded by placing into the "fancy," dismissing them, when they were found and tried. During the progress of their trial, one man explained that these ruffians had come with their sharpers company, peace-loving, quiet citizens, ignoring the customs of the people and defying them with insulting threats; that he, for one, had tolerated them long enough; he had been raised among Christian institutions and religious influences, and wasn't used to such things; for his part, he "was in favor of whipping them like hell, and setting 'em over on the other side of Jordan, and further, he would be one to help to do it."

Another speaker offered to be one of ten to buy up their whisky and whisky shops, and destroy it, upon condition that the ruffians would leave the country. At this point it was announced that one of the offending whisky sellers had yielded, and had promised to destroy the whisky without pay, and instead of leaving the country forever would never sell another drop of liquor and would remain and become a valuable citizen. He was then received back into the community; but his companions with the jumpers declining to yield, had their heads shaven and were sent over the river into fair young Iowa, the Botany Bay of Nebraska.

We are living here without laws, for the last act of the miserable Legislature of last Winter was to abolish all laws. Hence our only protection is to claim clubs, which happily are not much resorted to, we being generally an order-loving people.

Trains for California, Oregon, and the great post house of our country, poor degraded Utah, are now leaving here almost daily for their weary, lengthy journey. How much of suffering and toil, of privation and death, will they see ere they reach their destinations?

A pamphlet has appeared here from the press of A. S. Hazard & Co., of your City, giving a history and description of Nebraska. It contains much excellent advice to the emigrant and traveller, and a pretty correct account of the Territory. It is accompanied by a new county map, and altogether will prove a valuable aid to all interested in Nebraska.

OMAHA.

Terrible Whirlwind in Oneida County—Loss of Life.

From the Utica Herald, Monday.

On Saturday afternoon very many of our citizens noticed the appearance of very remarkable formation of nebulous or cloudy substance extending from the heavens nearly to the earth, where it seemed diminish almost to a point, but expanding gradually as it ascended, until the peculiar form was lost in the clouded sky. This resembles and tunnel-like column of cloudy mist appeared from the city at about 4 o'clock, and was remarked not only by its peculiar appearance, but by a rushing, buzzing noise, as it swept off in the direction of Deerfield.

It was watched for some moments, and people generally believed it to be a water spout, as its outline form corresponded, with all ideas of such natural phenomena. It soon passed from sight, and was made the subject of sportive conversation for the hour, without the least just conception of what the body consisted, or its destructive power. Its effects, however, have been most wonderful, and may justly attract the attention and scrutiny of the scientific world.

The conical mass first settled to the earth a few minutes past 4, in Deerfield, and in an instant scattered a barn to pieces, and tore up several trees on the opposite side of the road. Mr.

Mr. Isaac Warren informs us that he was engaged in his garden at about 4 o'clock, and saw the approach of the cloudy object as it threw up the trees. As its course pointed in the direction of his own house, he ran to the dwelling, caught two of his oldest children and called to his wife to save the other three and herself by following him to the cellar. The husband had descended two or three steps with his charge, and his wife, with an infant and two older children, had reached the cellar door, when the house was struck. The whole frame-work was lifted from its stone foundation; the entire wood-work above the first floor was scattered some twenty feet and then dropped in grand perfection of ruin, while the first floor with the sleepers attached, which caught in the foundation, was finally turned, roof like, over the entire mass.

Mr. Warren, with two of the children, remained in the cellar inclosure, without injury; Mrs. Warren was found on the ground about ten feet from the cellar door, almost entirely stripped of her clothing, and so severely injured about her neck and body that she died within an hour after the calamity, although entirely conscious; her infant was found near by and almost entirely free from injury, yet utterly destitute of clothing; a little boy who was following his mother to the cellar is now lying unconscious from the wounds he received in the common wreck. His recovery is very doubtful; an older girl escaped without any injury. The dwelling was two stories and substantially built. In the case of it was a barn, [illegible] into splinters.

Next in the due southeasterly line of the course it crossed several large farms, scattering the fences, [illegible] ing to Mr. [illegible] and very substantial build, and 35 by 50 feet upon its base, yet the destructive element tore it to pieces, scattering large timbers about the fields, at a distance of from five to fifteen rods, distributing portions of the roof in various directions, and actually taking up an iron cylinder threshing-machine, weighing perhaps 400 pounds, and depositing it at least 50 feet from the barn. A cow belonging to Mr. B., standing near the barn, was killed, without an apparent outward wound.

Beyond the premises of Mr. B., for about a mile prostrate trees and fences evidence the track of the destructive messenger. It, however, seemed to have released its hold upon the earth soon after leaving the farm of Mr. B; for it was distinctly seen to rise from the surface and dissolve its conical shape into a general cloudy form. The phenomenon was followed by violent rain and wind. Two men at work in a field saw the strange appearance approach, and took to their heels, barely escaping its track as it passed on. It seemed to rise from the earth in four or five minutes from the time it was first seen, and the evidences of its destruction lie in a district not over four [illegible] extent, in a due southeasterly direction, where its first touch was first felt, and in a track about fifteen rods in width. Whatever of material substance presented itself in this track was [illegible] and the ruin presented is certainly fearful to behold.

Of what the destructive power was conjectured we are not prepared to affirm, but of its force we can truthfully attest. Huge trees were tossed from their deep-rooted resting places as readily as a gardener would pull a radish from the sandy earth; fences and even fence-posts were sc

NEW-YORK CITY.

Farmers' Club.

The meeting of the Farmers' Club, on Tuesday, was very well attended, with the President in the chair. On the table was a splendid strawberry plant in full bearing, with a number of berries of unusual size, one of which measured four and a half inches in circumference. The President read some extracts concerning [illegible]

The cultivation of strawberries in France is chiefly in the environs of Paris and the larger cities. Prejudices exist against their free use as an aliment, owing to frequent accidents. Their substance is highly nutritious. In boiling they exhibit all the character and smell of boiling carrots in rank. They can only be eaten like animal food, moderately, and rapidly digested. All danger disappears when they are cultivated artificially in beds, as the unpalatable quality resides wholly in the seeds. [illegible]

The subject of the proper time for plowing and planting different soils was discussed at considerable length. One member who had considerable experience stated that heavy soils are generally injured by early plowing, and so soil ought to be disturbed until it is in a proper condition after the usual heavy spring rains. He said that some soils may be plowed and planted even in February, with success, but that, as a general rule, a much later period would be preferable.

PLANTING CORN.

The President made some statements in regard to the best time for planting corn, considered in connection with the final plowing of the soil, based upon his own experience. He said, after numerous trials, extending over a number of years, he had obtained the best results from planting on the day, or not later than the day after the ground was plowed, and that his practice now is to plow his land only as fast as he plants it. He said the soil undergoes a chemical change very rapidly after a fresh plowing.

STRAWBERRY CULTURE.

The strawberry question was next taken in hand, and a very able statement in reference to the best kinds of soils, the proper treatment and the most profitable bearing varieties adapted to our climate, with the value of the crop per acre, under the most favorable circumstances, was made by Mr. Parmly.

Mr. Parmly followed Mr. Parsons in reply to the question for how long a time it would be possible to grow a strawberry plant. He said Mr. Longworth, of Cincinnati, had succeeded in growing strawberries of excellent quality, during ten months of the year, after numerous experiments and unsuccessful trials. Mr. Parmly's method, described by the speaker, is as follows: He selects sandy soils, with a very light vegetable surface covering, by the side of small streams, and sets out his plants in the usual way, watering them well every day. By this means fruit stocks are constantly being sent up from the root all through the season, showing every stage of growth on the same root, from the bud to the ripe fruit. The only manure he uses (at the end of the season, in December,) is a slight covering of oak leaves, which are permitted to decay as the plant forces its way out in the spring. This simple contrivance prevents the growth of weeds and of leaf stocks on the plant, there usually being not more than one twelfth part of leaf substance as compared with the fruit.

Mr. Parsons corroborated Mr. Robinson's statement, and said that a gentleman, Mr. Henry Lawrence, of the third municipality of New-Orleans, was in the habit of supplying strawberries to that market for ten months in the year.

It was stated that in Paris, the strawberry was supplied to the markets during the entire year, in considerable quantities, and the seed of ripe strawberries may be planted immediately after the ripening of the fruit, and vigorous plants grow from it in the same season, without the necessity of a Winter freezing—contrary to the common belief.

It was stated that three hundred bushels of strawberries had been raised from a single acre, and that ordinary strawberries, in the season, average at least twelve cents a quart, while the finer qualities range from twenty-five cents to fifty cents a quart, and usually one-third of the crop are of the superior qualities.

AMERICAN THREAD.

Mr. Robinson introduced Mr. Moulton, the agent of an American Thread Manufacturing Company, at Willimantic, Conn., and exhibited a large number of specimens of American spool cotton thread, which he said he had himself tested with the greatest care. He had the testimony, also, of Messrs. Douglas & Sherwood, who had for some time used this thread on over one hundred and fifty sewing machines, in their shirt manufactory, with success, finding it invariably even, and, at least, one third stronger than the imported threads. He also said that various intelligent ladies of his acquaintance had, at his request, tested the thread, and there was but one voice in relation to its superiority.

Members took specimens away with them for trial, and the President requested complete samples of all the numbers to be submitted to a test under his own eye, with a view to a proper estimate upon its merits, a report of which will be [illegible] at a future meeting of the Club. Mr. Moulton stated, at the request of the President, that the Company [illegible] period [illegible] and c [illegible] manufacture in this country. He said this thread was laid and finished by a process patented by the Company, which gave a gloss like silk, and obviated the necessity for using wax, and that the thread was used very largely in sewed shoes.

In reply to a question from the President in regard to cost, Mr. Moulton said it was not greater than the cost of the best imported spool cottons. Only the best qualities of New-Orleans and Sea Island cottons, worth on an average fifty cents a pound, are used in the manufacture.

The subject for the next meeting was announced by Judge Mazes to be the "Natural History of the Ammonia Atom and its influence upon the commercial value of manures."

GEORGE W. MORTON, City Inspector.

THE NEW-YORK STATE INEBRIATE ASYLUM.—The Board of Trustees of this Institution held their second meeting (according to adjournment) in the City of New-York, June 17. A quorum being present the meeting was called to order by the President, Hon. BENJAMIN F. BUTLER. The minutes of the first meeting were read and approved. The Chairman of the Committee on By-laws submitted his report, which was read, approved, and accepted.

The Board completed its organization by electing Hon. WM. T. MCCOUN, of Long Island, Vice-President; Hon. JOSIAH B. WILLIAMS, of Ithica, Second Vice-President; J. H. RANSOM, Esq., of New-York, Treasurer, and J. EDWARD TURNER, Corresponding Secretary.

DEATH OF GRAHAM, THE DEFORMED MAN.—JAMES GRAHAM, a well known cripple, who was admitted in Bellevue Hospital sometime since in the last stage of pulmonary consumption, died on the 15th of May. For many years back citizens have been accustomed to see him moving about in a little hand-car, which he took in motion at pleasure by means of a crank attached to the wheels. Till within a year previous to his death, he had worked at the watchmaker's trade. He was very industrious, and found no difficulty in making a respectable living. His physical deformity did not interfere with his intelligence. A few days before his admission to the Hospital, having crawled out into the street for exercise, he became so feeble that he was unable to make his way to his lodgings, and late in the evening entered a barber's shop in the Bowery, whence he was taken to a lodging-house, down town, and finally to the Hospital. He was 42 years old at the time of his death, and unmarried.

YACHTING.—The annual race of the Hoboken Model Yacht Club will come off on Wednesday, June 24th. The Yachts will start from a stake-boat, anchored opposite the new Club-house, foot of Fourth-street, Hoboken. Prizes to consist of plate. This Club was organized only last September, and at present numbers 43 yachts and over 60 members. Some of the yachts have already distinguished themselves in these waters, while others are entirely new this season.

☞ There were in this port on Saturday, 758 vessels, including 26 steamers, 170 ships, 144 barks, 115 brigs and 195 schooners.

☞ The Pilot Commissioners, who are charged with enforcing the law to prevent deposits of rubbish in our harbor, and to prevent the piers becoming encumbered in any way, met on Wednesday, Captain RUSSELL BYNGUS in the chair. They resolved not to proceed to execute the law. They propose, among other things, to contract for a dredging machine, to remove accumulations from the slips, and to take some action with a view to prevent deposits from the sewers. The Pilot Commissioners are faithful and energetic men, who will perform what they undertake in a thorough manner.

MARINE COURT.

Before Hon. Judge McCarthy.

CLAIM FOR GENERAL AVERAGE.

Charles M. Barlow vs. William H. Bird and John Nelson.—The Captain claims that in 1855 he was master and owner of the schooner Eldorado, plying between New-York and New-Orleans and other Southern ports. That he applied to the defendants, who are ship-brokers in this city, to make a general average of the ship and cargo. That they did so, and he brings this action to recover a balance of $500 which he alleges they owe him. On the part of the defence it appeared that as the vessel was coming to this port she was cast near the Jersey shore, badly leaking, having lost her anchor, and the steamer Isaac P. Smith went to her relief and brought her to shore, and claimed $1,000 salvage; that suit was tried in the United States Court, and $350 and costs awarded to the libelants; that the defendants in this action employed counsel, and paid the judgment and all the expenses pertaining thereto. The defendants further insisted that they paid other expenses necessary for the care and protection of the vessel, amounting to $160 more than they had received from the insurance companies, and they claimed that the plaintiff had no interest in the vessel, but that it belonged to Thomas L. Ward, as whose agent they noted; and they never had heard that the plaintiff claimed any interest in her until within a short time past. The plaintiff produced documents to show that the agreement between him and Ward was to the effect that plaintiff should receive three-fifths of the net earnings for his services, &c., and Ward, who was a mortgage bill of sale on her, should receive the remainder. The Court held that the instrument merely showed that the defendant acted in good faith as the agent of Ward, and had paid more than they had received; and [illegible] not maintain this suit without joining Ward as a party in any event, and that it was questionable whether as the money was paid on Ward's order the suit should not be as against him if he (plaintiff) was entitled to bring it.

COURT OF SPECIAL SESSIONS—June 20.

Before Justices Osborne and Brownell.

The Court-room was crowded, as usual, with the friends of the prisoners, witnesses, and those whom curiosity had brought thither. The Judges took their seats at 9 A. M., and the Clerk called

"Mary Paw to the Bar." She was an exceedingly [illegible] woman, with a very dark complexion. The gist of the complainant's story is, that Mary, taking advantage of the owner's temporary absence from home, "took de kettle and run." She was caught with it in her possession.

Judge Osborne—Well, Mary, what have you got to say for yourself?

Prisoner—I was agoin' down de street and I met snoder woman wid de kettle, and she asked me to hold it.

Judge—Who was the woman?

Prisoner—Well, she couldn't come this morning.

Judge—She's guilty. Give her three months in the Penitentiary.

Louis Eberts had beaten Catharine, his wife. He appeared very sorry for what he had done, and Catharine asked the Judge to let him off. "He'll not do so any more, Judge," said she. The Judge told him he might go, and he went off sobbing, "I'll never do it again—as long as I'm alive I'll never do it again." It seems he was under the influence of liquor at the time he committed the offence.

Julia Shee, charged with petit larceny, was discharged, the witness failing to appear. Also, for the same reason, Michael Quinn, Ellen Cunningham and Charles Firsten, all complained of for assault and battery, were set at liberty without punishment. Firsten was complained of by Officer Clancy, of the Seventeenth Ward Municipal Police. "Policemen," remarked Judge OSBORNE, "almost invariably fail to appear after entering their complaints."

Samuel Johnson had complained of his wife Ann as an habitual drunkard, who neglected her family. He did not appear, and the Judge told the prisoner she might go. She looked as if she ought to be sentenced to the Inebriate Asylum for life.

Wm. Bickles, "an old Washington Market bummer," as Judge Conolly (not on the bench) told Judge OSBORNE, was a bloated looking specimen of the lowest class of dock thieves. He had stolen a barrel from a North River pier near Washington Market. He pleaded guilty, and said he was "in liquor" at the time, in extenuation of the offence.

Judge Osborne—Penitentiary for 3 months. That's right isn't it? (to Judge BROWNELL.) You (to the prisoner) are one of those old Washington Market thieves who know just enough not to steal so much as will take your case out of the Special Sessions.

Thomas Smith was another old offender. He stole a meerschaum pipe (June 18) and thus secured for himself apartments in the Penitentiary for 3 months.

Catherine McGurl stole a shawl from Ann Castor, June 17. The complainant was walking in the street, and Kate tore her shawl off her shoulders and ran away with it. The Judge asked the prisoner what she had to say.

Prisoner—I never did it.

Judge—You're an old acquaintance in this Court, I guess we'll give you 4 months in the Penitentiary.

Patrick Mulligan pleaded guilty to a charge of stealing three mats, worth $4, June 16.

Judge Osborne—How old are you?

Prisoner—Twenty-four.

Judge—You have the reputation of being an old thief. What's your excuse this time?

Prisoner—I didn't mean to, your Honor.

Counsel—He couldn't help it.

He was sent up for four months.

Elizabeth Schmidt, an old offender, stole some wearing apparel, worth $2, from Ellen Rowe, June 17. The witness did not appear. "It's too bad to let her go," said Judge CAROZNNE. "She has been here three times before. Let her go back till Tuesday." The complainant afterwards came into Court, and substantiated the charge, and Elizabeth was sent to the Penitentiary for four months.

Joseph Smith, a little boy, stole a pair of gaiters from William H. Ingraham, No. 304 Second-street, June 17.

Judge Osborne—Have you got any parents?

Prisoner—Yes.

Judge—Have they been to see you since you've been in jail?

Prisoner—Yes.

Judge—He has a good countenance; let inquiries be made about him, and meantime we'll remand him.

Frederick Stahl and John Switzer were complained of by John D. Block, No. 9 Jacob-street. Mr. Block was away from home, and the prisoners came to his leather store, June 18, and while Stahl, who was rather good looking, was talking to Mrs. Block, his confederate ran off with 5 sides of kip leather. They were caught with it in their possession before they had gone far. Sentenced to the Penitentiary four months each.

Michael Curry, a shoemaker, slapped Owen Murphy in the face, June 11. Both parties resided at No. 234 Greenwich-street. The Prisoner had been charged with a similar offence before Judge Conolly in the Police Court, and judgment suspended. "But," said the witness, "he would not leave off abusing me. There's a grass plot in front of the house—I'll tell you the whole story."

Judge Osborne—No you needn't; let the horticultural part go. What did he do to you?

Witness—He struck me with one hand, and held an awl in the other.

Judge—He was a shoemaker by trade, wasn't he? We find him guilty and suspend sentence. It's a very frivolous matter at best.

The complainant began to [illegible] Judge—The sentence is only suspended; we cannot hang a man because you want him hanged.

Wm. Roome was charged with throwing [illegible] Gotham Court, beating and kicking her at No. 154 Chrystie-street, June 16. The complaint did not appear.

Johnny Long (the well known prize-fighter) was complained of by a German named Augustus Geyer. It was alleged that the prisoner, during a quarrel on June 7, ran into the light wagon of the complainant, purposely and damaged it to the amount of $60. The carriage was worth $175. The case was postponed till Tuesday.

Christian Gaul, a tall gold beater, complained of as Eq. Jeff Williams, street. He split open the door of John Rice's room in the same house, June 8, and threatened to cut and stab the complainant, and threatened to kill him. It seemed both parties were to blame. The difficulty arose from their wives quarreling.

Judge Osborne—Disturbance complaint as trivolous. If the complainant is afraid of his life let him go before a Police Magistrate and state the circumstances, and probably they will both be bound over to keep the peace.

Several cases were here adjourned till Tuesday.

Thomas Butler failed to appear against James McGee, charged by him with assault and battery, and McGee was discharged.

Michael Nies and Michael Gillies were accused by Charles Eulenschmieckekeiner, as nearly as we could make it out, of knocking his eye and choking him at No. 66 Rose-street, June 14. The Clerk, with some difficulty called the complainant's name. He did not appear and the Clerk was about to call him again. "Discharge the prisoners," said Judge Osborne, "such a name as that ought not to be called but once."

John Lynch assaulted Henry Steinke in a public house May 18. They had a dispute about $5, and the prisoner took this method of balancing accounts. The Judge thought it was not an aggravated case, and found Lynch guilty, but suspended sentence.

John Grandon, a little boy, said John Harley, another little boy, took three shillings out of his drawer at No. 139 Cherry-street. The prisoner said he was only skylarking, and the prosecutor acknowledged that he put the money right back. "Foh!" said the Judge. "What did you bring the complaint for? Let him go!"

John Geyer and James Andrews were charged, in separate complaints, with assault and battery on two men named Eddington and Hirsch. The latter were going through Fourth-street, one Sunday evening, over a year ago, with some ladies and children, and a boy in the street struck one of the children with a paving stone. Hirsch took hold of the boy and threatened to have him arrested, when Geyer and Andrews came across the street, asked what they were doing to the boy, and assaulted them. The occurrence took place between Avenues A and B, May 26, 1856. The were both found guilty, sentence suspended as against Geyer, and Andrews fined $10.

William Hiskins and Thomas Lyons are private watchmen. On Monday, at 6 A. M., at No. 279 Fulton-avenue, Brooklyn, the prisoner assaulted Lyons, who is an old man, and injured him severely. His face was bruised in a terrible manner, and he showed a bunch of gray hair, which had been pulled out of his head in the assault. It was difficult to ascertain which was the most to blame, but the Judges finally sentenced Hiskins to 10 days' imprisonment, with a fine of $25. They afterwards changed it to $50 fine, without the imprisonment.

Margaret Wool, fifteen years old, was complained of by her mother for striking her. The testimony of the old lady was elicited with difficulty. "She had been living out and I was bringing her home."

Judge—Well, go on.

Witness—We were going home.

Judge—Eh, come to the point.

Witness—We were going along the street.

Judge—Did she strike you?

Witness—Yes.

Judge—Well, that's enough.

Margaret, who was not ill favored or ferocious-looking, cried a good deal.

"If you'll please to let me go home I'll never do it again."

Judge—Well, go home, and never strike your mother again.

John Bush was fined $25 for assaulting a negro with a cart-rung.

New-York Daily Times.

NEW-YORK, MONDAY, JUNE 22, 1857.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

We publish this morning a verbatim report of the speech of Gov. WALKER, of Kansas, delivered to the people of that Territory at Topeka, on Saturday, June the 6th. We also publish the address of Mr. ROBINSON to the Free State Legislature at Topeka on June 9th. Our special Kansas correspondence will be found interesting in other respects.

The State Treasurer of Ohio has announced that the July interest on the State debt will certainly be paid.

The great National Trial of reapers and mowers, has been appointed by the President of the United States Agricultural Society to take place on the 12th of next month, at Syracuse.

This certainly has been a most remarkable Summer thus far, as regards the weather and atmospheric phenomena. From every section of the country we receive accounts of tornadoes, whirlwinds, hail storms, heavy rains, and consequent freshets. Millions of dollars' worth of property have been destroyed by these causes within the present month of June.

A terrific hail-storm visited Washington and vicinity, yesterday afternoon, the hail-stones being of enormous size. Great damage was done to sky-lights and windows; and grain, vegetables, and shrubberries were beaten to the ground. Serious injury must have been done on the plantations in its track, which extended twelve miles in breadth.

We had another showery Sunday, yesterday, accompanied by thunder and lightning, but the weather was much warmer than it has been the past fortnight.

The new Commissioners dismissed forty, and appointed eleven men on Saturday, and ordered the Superintendent to distribute the force equally in the various precincts. By order of Mayor WOOD, the men in all the Wards were summoned again on Saturday to declare which Board they would recognize. In the Fourth Ward four men declared for the new. In all the other Wards the men declared for the old Board, which appointed nearly all of them within a few days. The wounded policemen are doing well. Four more of the Municipal Police surrendered their stars and caps last evening to Captain CRAPO, and reported for duty at the Superintendent's Station in Sixth-street.

Chief Engineer WALLACE still holds his levees at the Exchange, where he is called upon by prominent persons, invited to all sorts of entertainments, sent for the daguerreotype, and his picture, and bowed by all sorts of reporters.

A man named HOLLY HUBBARD attempted to murder his wife on Saturday at his residence, No. 249 Ninth-street, by cutting her throat with a razor. He inflicted some very dangerous wounds. Her recovery is regarded as doubtful. Mr. and Mrs. HUBBARD are Americans. They were formerly in good circumstances, but of late years have lived unhappily, and in poverty, in consequence of the husband's bad conduct. HUBBARD is in custody.

The June term of the Court of General Sessions closed on Saturday. A number of culprits were sentenced by the Recorder and City Judge, and in some cases judgment was suspended. HIRAM L. BARNES, who pleaded guilty to an attempt at arson in the fourth degree, was sentenced to six months' imprisonment in the City Prison.

Last evening, about 9 o'clock, a young man from this City was drowned at the new dock, New-York and Erie Railroad, Jersey City. His name we were unable to learn.

The work of street cleaning seems destined to meet with delay. The Mayor sent word on Friday last to Mr. VALENTINE, Clerk of the Common Council, that he would not sign the resolutions passed by both branches of the Common Council, authorizing the City Inspector to proceed with the cleaning of the streets forthwith. On Saturday the City Inspector sent a communication to the Counsel to the Corporation, asking advice as to the course proper for him to pursue in the premises. He had everything in readiness to enter upon the work of street cleaning to-day.

There were only 334 deaths in the city last week. The number of the week previous amounted to 353. There were 22 deaths from scarlet fever, 5 from small pox, 3 from measles, and 14 resulted from violent causes. The city was never more healthy.

Officer QUINN, of the Sixth, was terribly beaten yesterday morning, in a house of ill-repute in Centre-street, while attempting to quell a disturbance. Two of his assailants are in custody.

Nearly a dozen arrests for assaults, with intent to kill, were made by the police of the lower Wards on Saturday.

The Case of Mayor Wood.

A part of the press persists in maintaining the monstrous fiction that the riots incited, during the past week, by Mr. FERNANDO WOOD, were exclusively owing to an attempt to serve warrants upon him illegally, by the hands of the Metropolitan Police, and to his forcible ejectment of Mr. D. D. CONOVER from the Street Commissioner's Office. The end in view, of the journals which propagate this falsehood, is to change the issue, upon which Mr. WOOD is to be tried by the Courts, from a personal to a political one, and thus to enlist in his favor the sympathies of all who are opposed to the State Administration, and to the laws recently passed by the Legislature, affecting this City. The public are not to be deceived by any such blurring and mutilating of the facts of the case. As far as we can learn, the vast majority of the members of the very party which elected Mayor WOOD to office, protest indignantly against the misstatements upon which such an unwarrantable interpretation of his conduct is founded. Whether Mr. DEVELIN or Mr. CONOVER were legally appointed Street Commissioner, had little, if anything, to do with last Tuesday's disturbance. The rival pretensions of the old and new Police in an equally small degree affect the matter. Whether Governor KING acted indiscreetly or otherwise in abiding by the decision of Mr. NICHOLAS HILL, has neither a direct nor an indirect bearing upon the question. The brutalities perpetrated by Mr. WOOD's orders, and for which he will be tried, were upon individuals acting under the legal authority of the Coroner, and of the Coroner only—an officer whom the Mayor himself acknowledges to have been fully competent to arrest him. The assault upon the persons whom Coroner PERRY "commanded," as the Statute directs, "to assist him in seizing upon" the delinquent WOOD, was deliberately and willfully committed, after the latter had received due warning in relation to the dangers to which he exposed himself by resistance.

It is the sworn testimony of the Coroner—whose common-law authority is even greater than that of the Sheriff—that, before summoning a posse comitatus, he first went, unaccompanied, to the Mayor's office; that he was met, at the railing within it, by twenty or more municipal policemen, who denied him admission to Mr. WOOD's presence; that he declared to them that he was the Coroner and came with a process of arrest; and that the Mayor, after he had been informed of his business, ordered that he, THE DEFENDANT, SHOULD BE TURNED OUT OF THE ROOM. There is no getting over, or around, or behind this fact. Neither the Governor, nor the Metropolitan Police, nor the Coroner, had anything more to do with it than the Governor of Kansas, or the King of Siam. The necessary result was that the Coroner was compelled to fall back upon the law requiring him to "command every male inhabitant of the county, or as many as he should think proper," to aid him in fulfilling his duty. Sundry persons, belonging to the Metropolitan Police, were at hand, better adapted for service than a miscellaneous crowd; but they were only called upon, as has been stated by abundant witnesses, after the statute under which they were summoned had been read, and their office had been clearly defined.

The scandalous guilt of Mayor WOOD is as evident as the noonday. No better proof could be afforded that he is sensible of it, than this very effort which he is making, and which his friends are making, to change the issue between himself and the public. Not one out of ten of our citizens cares, per se, whether Mr. DEVELIN or Mr. CONOVER occupies the place of Street Commissioner. The TIMES has been compelled to censure the course of Gov. KING in some of his appointments, from the very outset. The choice he made of Police Commissioners was calculated to excite distrust and dissatisfaction, and would have tended to defeat the objects of a good, much more of an imperfect, law. The opinion of NICHOLAS HILL (a stanch Democrat) may, or may not, have been erroneous, in relation to the right of the Governor to appoint a successor to Mr. TAYLOR. In any case, the selection was little to our taste, and carried with it none of our sympathies. But these are individual opinions, and neither those held by us, nor by the Mayor, nor by the Governor, nor by any party, or segment of a party, can add to, or subtract from, the homage which every good citizen owes to the supremacy of the law, but especially those who have been elected to execute the law. And, therefore, for the Chief Executive Officer of a city like this to have failed in recognizing an officer like the Coroner, to have ordered him to be bullied and roughly handled, and to have driven away, with bloodshed, the posse which he, as a last resort, summoned to aid him, is an atrocity which cannot be exaggerated.

It is noteworthy that, although rivalry had for months existed between the respective partisans of the Metropolitan and Municipal Police forces—both professing to await the decision of the Court of Appeals—the first and only time that the claims of the former were interfered with by violence, was when an accidental opportunity offered of increasing Mr. WOOD's individual power—the possibility of doing so accruing, also, from the new charter, which the Mayor has almost as strenuously opposed as the Police Bill! On a score or more of previous occasions, the two conflicting elements have been brought within the probabilities of collision, but where the Mayor had no higher stake in view than the public good or the maintenance of the law. These, therefore, passed by without any appeal being made to brute force. The sudden death, however, of Mr. TAYLOR, and the unexpected presentation of himself by a State appointee, at the Street Commissioner's Office, touched the Mayor upon the only point where he has once shown himself to be either politically sensitive, or personally sensitive, viz.: his individual aggrandizement.

The "Governors" of Kansas.

We publish, to-day, an address, which may be fairly enough called the true Inaugural Address of Gov. WALKER to the people of Kansas, for the gubernatorial function, in a free country, is not a sham, but a reality. It is the actual exercise, by one man, of the faculty of control, for the use and benefit of his fellow-men. And a man, therefore, really inaugurates his office in a Territory situated as Kansas now is, when he honestly and directly meets the difficulties of his position, and accepts the actual responsibilities which it imposes.

We took occasion to find fault with the nominal Inaugural of the new Governor of Kansas, precisely because in that speech Governor WALKER wandered away not once, but several times, from the sharp and vital questions before him into general disquisitions upon subjects of political economy and of social philosophy, more apt to the discussions of the college lecture-room, or the scientific association, than to the halls of legislation, or the conferences of an outraged and indignant people with the functionary who was to restore them to peace, by commanding their confidence and their respect. It affords, therefore, the more satisfaction to commend to the attention of our readers the plain, practical, and altogether satisfactory language in which Governor WALKER addressed the people of Kansas at Topeka on the 6th of June.

Nothing could be more direct than the Governor's premises; nothing more sage than his counsels. He undertakes to exert his utmost influence in every legal direction to insure for the will of the majority in Kansas a fair hearing and an efficient action. He declares that if the Constitutional Convention shall not submit the result of its deliberations to the judgment of the people, he will join the people of Kansas in all legitimate efforts to repudiate that result. In fact, while Governor WALKER is very particularly careful to maintain the positions which, as an official of the Federal Government, it becomes him to maintain, he shows as warm and as manly a sympathy with the great democratic instincts of the people of Kansas, as is manifested by Governor ROBINSON, in his address to the Topeka Legislature on the 9th of June.

Those who will take the trouble to read both of these documents impartially and quietly will come, we are sure, to the conclusion that the cause of Freedom is not likely to receive any serious detriment in Kansas, while the people of the Territory are represented by so calm and resolute a will as that of Governor ROBINSON, and the disposition of the Federal Government by so just and pacific a temper as that of Governor WALKER.

OUR CITIZEN SOLDIERY.—The high commendations bestowed by the Boston press on the fine appearance of our Seventh Regiment, which visited them to participate in the Bunker Hill celebration, must be extremely gratifying to the officers and members of that regiment. The Bostonians, it seems, had never before seen such perfect military evolutions, and the Boston press has given vent to the admiration of the people in the most laudatory terms of praise, which will act as a stimulant to our other regiments to emulate the admirable drill of the Seventh.

Our New-Granadian Relations.

All hope of any proposition from New-Granada for a peaceful adjustment of pending difficulties with the United States, is dissipated by the last advices from that quarter. The new President, OSPINA,—though known to entertain kindly sentiments towards us, and believed to be personally solicitous for an arrangement satisfactory to our Government—evidently dares not brave the popular sentiment against any accommodation; so he remains entirely silent on the subject. The fact affords another indication of the imbecility of the New-Granadian Government, and its utter powerlessness to maintain its laws and treaty obligations against the ignorant passions of a semi-barbarous people: and it indicates as well the futility of all expectation that the fearful riots of last year, and the robbery and massacre of American citizens at Panama, will ever be atoned for in any degree until the power of the United States has made itself felt upon the Isthmus.

Under these circumstances, the course which our Government ought to pursue becomes a serious and important question. If our demand of indemnity for the past, and security for the future was untenable, self-respect and national duty require that we should retire from it frankly. If it was just when first presented, it is just now, and ought to be pressed with decisive firmness and vigor. We believe it was and is just,—and that every consideration of national honor and of duty to our citizens requires its enforcement. The weakness of New-Granada was a good reason why we should not proceed hastily to extremities; but it affords none for disgraceful retirement before the puerile insolence of a puny Republic. Had weakness and poverty been plead in bar of execution, we might have suspended judgment as an act of grace; but when our complaints are treated with mockery, our demands for redress with insult, and our propositions to aid the fulfilment of treaty stipulations are spurned with contempt, we become justly the scoff of other nations, and confess our pusillanimity, if we fail to teach the aggressor a lesson of our power and will to enforce every just demand.

It is an error to suppose that this controversy is one for the benefit of the Panama Railroad Company, or the California Steamship line. Not so. They happen to be the agencies through whose assistance our citizens just now seek to avail themselves of the privilege of crossing the Isthmus in passing to and from the Pacific Ocean. They thus become necessary but minor incidents in the pending discussion. The treaty between the United States and New Granada—made for the express purpose of inviting and guaranteeing protection to commerce and travel viâ the Panama route—has no reference to particular companies or enterprises. It guarantees, in general terms, protection of persons and property of either party resident or temporarily in the respective countries. The obligation is mutual. We are bound to respect and protect New-Granadian rights here, and New-Granada stipulates to protect our citizens and their property while in her dominions. In consideration of this and other stipulations, the United States agrees to guarantee the neutrality of the Isthmus—thus precluding itself for all time to come from acquisition in that quarter, and pledging itself to preserve the integrity of our sister Republic against the assaults of a foreign foe.

Any one whose mind recurs to the bloody scenes of April, 1856, at Panama, will realize the sort of protection which New-Granada affords. Many precious lives, and a large amount of property, were sacrificed to the brutal violence of a mob, composed in part of the troops of the Republic. Even women and innocent children fell before the fury of an ungovernable band of semi-savages; buildings were destroyed, and the personal property of the victims of this outrage was seized and appropriated with bandit audacity. For all this we have demanded indemnity,—and that demand is insolently rejected. Nay more,—no effort has been made for the recovery of the stolen property, and none for the punishment of the guilty. Thus a premium for fresh outrage is offered, of which brutality and cupidity will be likely to avail itself whenever our expensive squadrons at Aspinwall and Panama are withdrawn. Can we tamely submit to so flagrant a violation of the treaty guarantee of protection, and let the criminals go unwhipped of justice, without assuming the responsibility of future reënactments of the scenes of April? Can we retire from our just demands without lasting dishonor? It is impossible. Indemnity for the past is a debt due to the injured citizen, for which our Government has become sponsor, and which it must secure. There is no evading it—no mode of compromising it.

Under the protection and guarantees of a treaty into which New-Granada entered from motives of self-interest, American capital, energy and skill have constructed a railroad which has become the great highway of nations across the Isthmus. With the protection stipulated this great work is of inestimable value to its proprietors and to the world. Without it, it is comparatively valueless, because commerce and travel is necessarily checked or extinguished by anything which renders it insecure and uncertain. Without the treaty it never would have been constructed. American energy would have sought some other avenue of inter-oceanic communication, and American enterprise would have supplied it with the needed facilities. The question now is whether we shall give up the best possible means of communication with the Pacific, over the most favorable and practicable route yet discovered, because the Government of New-Granada—which invited and encouraged its establishment, and has reaped of its benefits—chooses to disregard its solemn and unalterable engagements?

In answer, we are met again by the assertion of New Granada's inability to restrain the turbulent spirits who sway affairs in the State of Panama. We admit the plea at once, and propose an easy means of relieving her from the expense of affording the protection that she is bound to give. We propose that, without abating one jot of her sovereignty, she shall so shape the government of the interoceanic route as to enable us to keep her outlaws in subjection at our own expense. Nay, more, for the privilege of thus relieving her from the trouble and expense of a duty which she confesses her political and pecuniary inability to discharge, we even offer to pay a sum more than sufficient to indemnify our citizens for the pecuniary losses to which New-Granadian imbecility subjected them in April, 1856.

This liberal arrangement—objectionable alone to the beggardly pride characteristic of decaying Princes—is rejected with scorn. To sum up—New-Granada's duty to protect the Isthmus transit is clear. She confesses herself unable to fulfill it,—and then refuses to avail herself of the means of doing so, which we place at her disposal. If there ever was a case in which the energetic exercise of every power of a government was demanded for the enforcement of treaty stipulations, the present is that case; and a fearful responsibility will rest upon the national administration should it hesitate in that course, and so peril the great interests which centre on the Panama route. The demands made through Messrs. MORSE and BOWLIN were just in every particular, so far as we understand them, and their rigid exaction at whatever needed cost, will be as triumphantly sustained by the American people as it is demanded by every consideration of equal justice and sound public policy.

The Chinese Mission.

The present week, it is hoped, will see Hon. WM. B. REED fairly upon his way toward the East, for the purpose of assuming the duties and responsibilities of United States Minister to China. The interests confided to his care, in this connection, are of no common order, and if he shall display the wisdom, prudence, and fidelity which the country expects, he may hope to accomplish for his country more than any diplomatic agent of the United States has secured during many years past. Our commerce with China is second only to that of England; and, in a few years, with the stimulus it will receive from a line of steamers between San Francisco and Shanghae, and in the facilities extended by the Panama Railroad, and through our California clippers, there is no reason why we should not surpass even Great Britain in the extent and value of our trade with the Celestials. There is little required by Chinamen for consumption that we do not produce, and they have scarcely anything to sell which we are not ready to purchase at all times. But John Bull got in ahead of us, and so acquired an advantage which he has hitherto maintained.

Events growing out of the internal dissensions among the Celestials have tended to open the heart of the Kingdom wider than ever before to foreign intercourse,—and it is believed that judicious negotiation may break down, to a great extent, the wall of exclusiveness which has hitherto prevented the outward development of Chinese resources and so of foreign commerce. If such a result can be brought about, the United States must inevitably be more benefited by it than any other nation. All we want is a fair field—equal opportunities with other nations, to attract and maintain a large proportion of the increasing trade. England foresees this,—and Mr. REED will find exercise for all his wisdom and industry to check-mate the efforts of our transatlantic cousins to secure the weather-gauge of us. In dealing with the Celestials he will, of course, carefully avoid any committals to either party in the pending Revolution, and in his negotiations will unite decisive firmness in behalf of just demands, with a scrupulous regard for the rights of other parties, and all proper consideration for the customs, peculiarities and even whimsicalities of the Chinese if need be.

China can never be opened by gunpowder, for she is crowded with such a surplus of human beings that war, however sanguinary, makes comparatively little or no impression upon her population. Even pestilence, sweeping down its tens of thousands, proves a national blessing rather than a plague—a sort of weeding operation by which needed room is obtained for the growth and development of the survivors. Our diplomacy, consequently, must rely for success on peaceful measures alone; and when they fail there is no remedy. This single consideration presents at a glance the difficult and delicate character of the duties which Mr. REED has assumed to discharge. If he shall achieve success, his triumph will be better deserved and more enduring than any to which military chieftain ever aspired.

Municipal Rights of European Cities.

There have been various attempts made, since the commencement of this Police controversy, to back up the Mayor's cause by citing European cities, and particularly London, as examples of the respect paid, even by monarchical Governments, to municipal authority. No despotic Government, we are told, ever attempted so gross an outrage upon the rights and privileges of a chartered municipality as has been perpetrated upon the Mayor and Common Council of New-York, in taking out of their hands the appointment of Police Constables.

Paris and London are, we believe, the two principal capitals in Europe. As for Paris, the gens d'armerie are, as all the world knows, soldiers acting under the direct orders of the Préfet, and the Préfet is the servant of the Minister of the Interior, and the Minister of the Interior of His Imperial Majesty NAPOLEON III. The Sergens de ville, who are the servants of the Municipality, take about as much share in preserving order as the doorkeeper of the Common Council is maintaining the peace in New-York. Paris, however, is so completely in the hands of an unscrupulous despot, that, as we have already said, we do not think the illustration is of much value in determining the rights of the belligerents in the present contest. London furnishes a case much more nearly in point because it is the City whose Charter has furnished the model of those by which our own has been governed for two hundred years, and is one, moreover, which flourishes under a system of government and of law very nearly akin to our own. The only portion of London in which the municipal police are employed, is that portion known as the "city," containing about 100,000 inhabitants out of a total of 2,500,000. The whole of the remainder of that vast metropolis, with its huge suburbs, on both sides of the river, covering an area of about sixty square miles, in the map of which "the city" is little more than a dot, is subject to the jurisdiction of the Home Secretary, acting through the Metropolitan Police Commissioners, who are his appointees, and responsible to him alone for official misconduct, he himself being of course responsible to Parliament. Moreover, all offences committed on the Surrey side of the river, from Richmond down to Greenwich, and on the other side of Hampstead Hill to Temple Bar, and from Highgate to the Thames, are brought before magistrates appointed by the Home Secretary, and holding office during his pleasure.

THE CORPORATION LOTTERY AND WHO GOT THE PRIZES.—We have already given an account of the manner in which the reconciliation was effected between the Mayor and the Aldermen in the selection of candidates to fill the offices of Inspectors of Ships and Street Commissioner, and how the spoils of the Street Department were distributed by lottery among the high contracting powers. But we omitted to mention that the Mayor himself took a chance at the prizes with the Aldermen. The five highest prizes were drawn in the following order:

1. Alderman HARRIS.
2. Alderman MCCONKEY,
3. Alderman HEALY,
4. Alderman STEERS,
5. Mayor WOOD; and so on.

The Mayor was greatly disappointed, it is said, at not obtaining the 1st prize, the office of Collector of Assessments, which is quite as valuable, in a pecuniary point, as that of the Commissioner.

These are the current rumors in relation to this matter, and bear out the determination of the Mayor not to permit any outsiders to participate in the City spoils.

THE CITY ALL QUIET.—The assurance of some of our daily cotemporaries that the City is "all quiet," may, and probably will, mislead our out-of-town friends to think that it has been otherwise. The quiet of the City was not in the least disturbed, at least externally, except in the immediate neighborhood of the Mayor's office. The riotous proceedings were all enacted under the august shadow of the wooden Justice who stands on the cupola of the City Hall; and the rioters were only the officers who are commissioned to preserve the peace. The City is as quiet as it has been, and, thanks to the copious showers with which we have been favored during the past fortnight, a good deal cleaner than we had any reason to expect it would be.

THE DIAMOND SMUGGLING.—The property seized on board the steamer Fulton, in the possession of the steward, has been valued at $15,000. It consists of gold jewelry, oriental pearls and precious stones. If forfeited to the Government, as it no doubt will be, the Court, as is customary, will order the distribution of the property according to law, which is as follows: The half goes into the United States Treasury, one quarter of the nett proceeds to the private informant, where there is one, and the balance is shared by the Collector, Naval Officer and Surveyor; but as the informant is generally required to sign an affidavit declaring that he has no interest, direct or indirect, in the case before proceeding any further, he is sometimes confronted with the fact that the law provides for a division of the spoils, and yet that the law unfortunately makes no provision for him.

It is said this was actually done in a case which occurred not long since, and so the informant got nothing. In this case it is not impossible that an agreement exists between the three officers of the port to give the informant half of their share, by which means the informant does not appear, and is thus enabled to keep his eyes open for other cases.

A petition has been filed against the libelling of the steamer on the ground that her officers were not cognizant of the attempt to smuggle, and, as in other cases of the kind, she will no doubt be released by the Secretary unless he should think it necessary, as he said he intended at some time, to enforce strictly the penalty for violation of the Revenue laws.

THE STREETS—THE MAYOR DOES NOT APPROVE THE COMMON COUNCIL'S ACTION.—The two weeks' agreement for cleaning Broadway, between the storekeepers, on that thoroughfare, and Mr. SMITH, of the sweeping machines, expired last Saturday night. Though the weather was raining for eight days of the twelve, that street has been kept in good condition, and has been swept its whole length ten times. Heretofore it has been deemed impossible in rainy weather, to sweep to advantage, but the success of this experiment with the machines has proved the contrary. With water-tight carts to remove the dirt, the work can be more easily performed in wet weather, for the mud is then soft and easily swept off. The merchants, it is probable, in the absence of measures by the Corporation to keep Broadway clean, will renew their contract with Mr. SMITH.

Meanwhile the majority of the Wards have relapsed into their former deplorable condition.

Last week resolutions were adopted by both Boards of the Common Council authorizing the City Inspector to advertise immediately for proposals to clean the streets, and empowering him, until such contracts should be confirmed, to go on with the work himself. These resolutions Mayor WOOD last Thursday returned to the Clerk of the Common Council without expressing his approval or disapproval of them.

Section 11 of the New Charter says:

"Every legislative act of the Common Council shall be by ordinance, act or resolution, which shall have passed the two Boards of Common Council, before it shall take effect shall be presented duly certified, to the Mayor of the City for his approval. If he approve, he shall sign it; if not, he shall return it with in ten days thereafter with his objections, to the Board in which it originated.

Section thirteen also provides:

"If the Mayor shall not return the ordinance so presented to him within the time above limited for that purpose, it shall take effect in the same manner as if he had approved it."

Mr. MORTON says, as the Mayor has declined to act on the resolutions, he believes that he has no authority to commence work until the 20th inst., when the ten days will have expired. To make all sure, however, he has twice written to the Corporation Counsel for his opinion, but has not yet received an answer. If Mr. BUSKIRK should advise him to go on with the work, he promises immediately to proceed, and give the City a clean sweep.

CRUELTY ON SHIP-BOARD.—A colored sailor, badly wounded and bruised about the head and body, appeared yesterday morning before Justice CONNOLLY, and stated that he had been, that morning, beaten by the mate of the ship Wyoming, on board that vessel, then lying in the stream preparatory to her departure for Europe. The complainant stated that he was one of the crew of the Wyoming. After the vessel had dropped down the stream, all hands were called on deck by the mate and a quick response was made by all except himself (the complainant) who feeling very ill did not obey the summons as quickly as the mate expected. The mate grew angry, and putting upon his fingers a pair of brass knuckles, he attacked the colored man and beat him so cruelly that he was forced to leap overboard to escape further violence. He swam some distance when he was picked up and conveyed ashore. The mate, it is said, assisted several of the other men and beat them also.

A warrant for the mate's arrest was issued, but it was not served at the time of the closing of the Court.

PROPERTY OF THE LATE JOSEPH S. TAYLOR.—Application will be made in a few days for letters of administration in the matter of the estate of the late JOSEPH S. TAYLOR, deceased, late Street Commissioner, by his widow. It is understood that Mr. TAYLOR had no assets beyond the life insurance; in fact, his liabilities were large, some say to the extent of $20,000, a large portion of which is due his father, Jeremiah R. TAYLOR, Collector of Assessments, Revenue and Controller.

The life insurance policy was for $40,000,—one-half [illegible] all the Wards by Mayor WOOD's Orders, &c.

All was quiet Saturday and Sunday in police circles. The new Board met at White-street, Saturday morning, and dismissed forty men for insubordination, and made eleven appointments. A resolution was adopted directing the General Superintendent to distribute the forces equally in the several precincts.

On Monday 26 men of the Twenty-Second Ward, 20 in the Eighth Ward, and 17 in the Twelfth Ward, will be tried for insubordination.

Complaints have been entered against three of the force in the First, Sixteenth and Fourteenth Wards who have refused to recognize the new law.

The Board adjourned to Monday.

The old Board did not meet on Saturday.

On Saturday, at the sun-down rollcalls, the entire Municipal Police were mustered in their respective Wards, in obedience to a general order issued by Mayor WOOD, and required to signify their preference either for the old or new Police Commissioners. All the Wards were heard from. The men were unanimous for Mayor WOOD, except four in the Fourth Ward, who declared for the new Commissioners. Their names are Murphy, Dunning, Folger and Orum. Many others of the old Police, it is expected, will, to-day, report themselves for duty at the office in White street.

Officer Connery, of the Sixteenth, delivered up his star and resigned on Saturday.

Harrison Ballamy, a native of the United States, aged 33 years, and Municipal policeman, was among the list of persons arrested for intoxication in the Ninth Precinct, on Sunday night. Sergeant Sebring alludes to the affair as follows, on his report to Deputy Carpenter: "Information was received this morning (given by A. M. C. Smith) by undersigned Sergeant Carpenter, that a man was lying in a heavily state of intoxication at the corner of Fifteenth-street and Seventh-avenue. Officer Clark was dispatched to the locality, where he found Ballamy lying upon his back. His star and club were in the possession of some citizens. His cap was lying upon the sidewalk, while his coat, which was closely buttoned to his throat, plainly showed that he belonged to Mayor Wood's force.

THE WOUNDED.

The men wounded at the late police collision are all doing well. Mr. Crofut bids fair to recover. Capt. Squires says on his return yesterday, "Officer Lalla is doing well—the bruises have mostly disappeared, and the stab wounds are healing."

Shields, which are to be worn instead of stars by the new force, will be delivered to the men to-day.

COMING OVER.

Four more of the old force declared last night for the new Police Commissioners,—gave up their stars and caps and reported for duty to Capt. Squires, at the new Station-house in Sixth street.

A MAN CUTS HIS WIFE'S THROAT WITH A RAZOR.—Notice was given at the Seventeenth Ward Municipal Station, about 1 o'clock Saturday afternoon, that a man named HOLLY HUBBARD, residing at No. 249 Ninth-street, had just cut his wife's throat with a razor, wounding her severely, and that she could not possibly long survive. Policemen CHARLES and JAMINCE were sent to the place designated, and there they found MRS. HUBBARD lying on the floor of her room, weltering in blood. Her throat was cut in several places, and her breast and hands were gashed. She was able to speak, and in reply to questions put to her said, "Twas my husband who did this." The husband, who had not left the premises, was thereupon taken in custody. His clothes and hands were besmeared with blood flown from the wounds which he had inflicted on his wife. A bloody razor, with which the assault had been committed, was lying near by.

Police Surgeon SHEPPARD was soon in attendance, and Coroner GAMBLE was notified that he might hold an inquest anon.

After her wounds had been dressed Mrs. HUBBARD revived considerably, and later in the afternoon was able to answer the questions asked her by the Coroner, in presence of a Jury summoned to attend. Mrs. HUBBARD's statement to the Coroner was as follows:

"Mary Elizabeth Hubbard, being duly sworn, says—I reside at No. 249 Ninth-street; Holly Hubbard, at whose hands I received my injuries, is my husband; we have been married fourteen years; I threatened to leave him several times on account of ill treatment, and his having diseased me; he was very intemperate, and used to go with other women; I separated from him about eighteen months ago; we had two children; he made fair promises to me of his reform, and we came together again the following May; that was about four months after our separation; I lived with him then until January last; he was no better than before; he gave me no support; I left him last January, and took the children with me; since then I lived in Williamsburg, in a situation as housekeeper, up to the 5th of May last; he agreed to bring back the children, and have his sister support the family if I would live with him; I agreed to this, and consequently we hired apartments in the house No. 249 Ninth-street; he did not bring back the children since; they are with his people in Greenwich, Conn.; I have supported him and myself by taking in washing, &c.; I was constantly asking him to go for the children; he agreed to go on Saturday last, a week ago; I provided him with money to enable him to do so; he left home, and returned the following Friday without the children, saying that his family would not permit him to bring the children if I did not consent to go to the country and live with him. He has been noting since his return as if he was continually under the influence of liquor. He said last evening that he would go to-day for the children, and he packed his trunk and set out to do so. I told him this morning if he did not bring back the children I would not live with him. He said, I guess you do not want me to live with you anyhow. He then proposed to me to sign a bill of mutual separation; and that he would take one of the children and give me the other. I said I would do so as quick as I got the child. He wanted me to go to Portchester to sign this agreement; I asked why it would not do for me to sign it here? He answered, that he had his own reasons for my going with him to Portchester. He left me after he had this conversation; was gone about two hours; when he returned I was lounging in the bedroom; he was no one present but myself; he came into the room and approached me, asking if his clothes were ready. I answered that they were, and asked him to take something to eat; he made no answer, but went towards the closet in the room; he then came to me and placed his arm around my neck; I thought he was going to caress me as he was going away; soon I found he was in the act of cutting my throat; I called for help and flung myself on the floor. He endeavored to raise me up, and I called out "he is killing me." Upon this, some gentlemen in the house came in and took him away from me; he was removed by some officer, and the doctor came and dressed my wounds. There was a razor in the closet which I had used for peeling onions, and this was the instrument he used to inflict the wounds upon me; I did not see it in his hands, but saw it soon after."

When the statement had been concluded the Jury rendered a verdict that the wounds from which MRS. MARY E. HUBBARD was suffering were inflicted by her husband, HOLLY HUBBARD. The accused was thereupon committed to the Tombs, by order of the Coroner.

MRS. HUBBARD is about 30 years of age, and a native of Massachusetts. She was alive last evening, but her recovery was regarded as very doubtful.

The prisoner is a native of Connecticut. His people as well as those of his wife, are wealthy and respectable.

EXCURSION TRAINS ON HUDSON RIVER RAILROAD.—This Company has made arrangements at all their stations between this City and Albany, to sell trip tickets, or rather tickets to and from New-York, good for the day upon which they are issued. These are sold at a reduction of more than one-third from the regular rates.

This arrangement will be a great benefit to our citizens, who are desirous of living on the river, and yet are under the necessity of doing business in the City, and affords satisfactory evidence of a desire, on the part of the Hudson River Company to adapt its rates of fare to the necessities of the traveling public.

☞ The Courrier des Etats Unis says of the rescue of PAROU, one of the defendants in the Extradition case: "The flight of PAROU places the Sheriff in an extremely embarrassing position; making him responsible to the Northern Company for the amount of the prisoner's bail—some $500,000. Besides the audacity of braving the law thus openly and assailing its officer, there is reason why special energy should be given to the pursuit of PAROU and the prosecution of his liberators."

☞ The steamships Atlantic, Vanderbilt and Glasgow left this port at noon Saturday, respectively for Liverpool, Havre and Glasgow. They carried out an aggregate of five hundred and twenty one passengers. The Atlantic and Vanderbilt took out $[illegible] in specie—a greater sum than the total shipment during the month of June, 1856. The steamer Star of the West also sailed Saturday for Aspinwall. She carried out the semi-monthly mails for the Pacific and 470 passengers.

War Department Orders—Illness of Commodore Jones—Terrific Hail Storm, &c.

WASHINGTON, Sunday, June 21.

The War Department has issued orders to the Army, directing that when officers of the Army arrive at the seat of Government they will report at the office of the Adjutant and record their names; and during their sojourn in the city will wear either the undress costume prescribed in paragraph 1,074 of the general regulations, or the military frock coat with or without epaulettes, at their option; and that the inspection of military supplies reported as unserviceable required by paragraph 1,057 of the general regulations for the Army, will, unless otherwise ordered, be made by the commanding officers of posts. Fort Cascades, Washington Territory, is announced as a double ration post, and will be considered as such from the date of its occupation.

Commodore THOMAS AP. CATESBY JONES, U. S. N., is lying dangerously ill of an affection of the heart. His life is despaired of.

Professor ANDERSON, the new Commissioner on Coinage, had an interview with Secretary COBB, today, and will soon leave for England. He is instructed under no circumstances to yield the decimal principle.

The surplus in the Treasury was reduced nearly half a million of dollars last week.

HENRY C. SCHOMAN, of Pennsylvania, has been appointed by the Secretary of the Treasury, a first-class—$1,200—clerk in the office of the Commissioner of Customs, vice JOSEPH DOWDELL, resigned.

A terrible thunder-storm at about 5 o'clock this afternoon passed over this city, and 10 or 10 minute, hailstones of an enormous size fell. Some of the stones weighed from five to six ounces. There was an immense destruction of skylights, windows of churches, public and private buildings and Government conservatories. Several private galleries of art were seriously damaged, trees were half stripped of their foliage, and grain, vegetables and shrubbery were beaten to the earth. There are some cases of horses and cows which were severely cut. The storm extended twelve miles in breadth, and its course was from the southwest to the northeast. No reports have been received from the plantations in this vicinity, but the crops are undoubtedly greatly injured, if not entirely ruined.

The Utah Rebellion—Why McCulloch Declined—Matrimonial Argument—The Darien Ship Canal—Affairs with New-Granada.

WASHINGTON, Wednesday, June 17, 1857.

Again the Governorship of Utah goes begging, ex-Governor THOMAS, of Maryland, having respectfully declined it. Rumor assigns the appointment now to three or four other parties,—but Mr. CUMMINGS seems to be most likely to obtain it at this time. If offered to him now it is understood that he will accept. Since the President has decided definitely to send troops to Salt Lake to establish the supremacy of the law, there seems to be less anticipation of serious difficulty in effecting that object, which certainly ought make it easier to find a suitable man to fill the office of Governor. The tone of such prominent Mormons as are within reach, is materially modified within the last week or two. They mount the idea of any collision, put on the air of men aggrieved to suicides, and declare that the troops will find they have nothing whatever to do when they reach their destination.

NOW YOUNG WILL YIELD.

This is significant of returning sense or of a crafty foresight of the futility of any attempt to maintain open rebellion against Federal authority. The presence of an armed force sufficient to protect the officers of the law in the execution of its forms, at least, will put an end to overt acts of rebellion. That it will establish justice in that Territory there is little hope;—and hence arises the most serious difficulty which the Administration finds in dealing with the Mormon question. Nothing can be clearer than that BRIGHAM YOUNG, while yielding to legal forms, will take care, by suborning jurors as in the past, to use those forms themselves to work his will; while the ready obedience of his secret band of Danite assassins will find safe means of punishing and effectually suppressing any attempts to evade his commands.

FUNDAMENTAL REASONS FOR DECLINING OFFICE.

Major BEN MCCULLOCH who has been here for several days, was again strenuously urged by the President to undertake the Governorship. The Major, among other reasons for declining, suggested that he would inevitably suffer in public estimation if he should undertake to fulfil the duties of that position, for the reason that the people would expect him to string up BRIGHAM YOUNG at once, and thrash his adherents soundly—gentle pastimes for indulgence in which he was well satisfied the Mormons would give him no pretext when they found him backed by troops. If a peaceful policy was to be pursued—as he believed it must be necessarily—the Major thought it better that some man of whom the public have a less ferocious idea, and consequently less ferocious expectations, should be the instrument of its initiation and development at Salt Lake. The President was unwilling to let him off on this plea,—and then the Major fired his reserve,—informing the bachelor Executive that he couldn't go because he was intending to get married soon—a duty, the discharge of which he had neglected for forty years or more, until his day of grace had nearly expired. This argument brought Mr. BUCHANAN down. He at once acknowledged its invincibility, and bowed his acquiescence.

THE SHIP CANAL EXPEDITION.

The expedition ordered to survey the Atrato and Truando Rivers Ship Canal route across the Isthmus of Darien, will not set out before October next, when the season for operations there will be most favorable to the health of the party, and to dispatch in the fulfilment of the duty assigned them. Secretary TOUCEY manifests a good deal of interest in the work, and seems determined to carry out the order of Congress for the survey in the most liberal manner. Mr. KENNISH, of the Engineers who made the original private survey of this route, will be appointed as guide to the party,—but otherwise the survey will be conducted entirely by the U. S. officers detailed for that purpose. Mr. TOUCEY does not deem himself authorized to provide measures for making examinations of any other proposed ship canal route than this one to which Congress specially directed his attention.

PREPARATIONS FOR JOINT SURVEY.

Mr. KELLY, President of the Atrato Ship Canal Company, has been anxious for a general survey of the Isthmus, for the purpose of ascertaining where the best route for a canal lies, and during his recent sojourn abroad had obtained assurances from both the British and French Governments that they would cheerfully respond to an invitation from the Government of the United States to unite in a joint survey of that character. It is unfortunate that so desirable an arrangement should fail of consummation; but the interest awakened by the Atrato Survey may lead Congress next Winter to provide for an extension of its search after information on this important subject.

THE NEW GRANADIAN QUESTION.

The Administration is silent on New-Granadian affairs, evidently disposed to wait awhile to see what will turn up. Mr. BUCHANAN has a very conservative dread of positive collision, and will be glad to avoid it with New-Granada, if possible. But it is difficult to see how he can hesitate to enforce the demand made through Commissioner MORAN, unless, on behalf of the nation, he is ready to condemn the course of his predecessor in making those demands, and to frankly and publicly withdraw them. That he will thus outrage public sentiment, and humiliate the nation, is not to be anticipated. Take it altogether, and our position before the word with respect to this Isthmian imbroglio, is not calculated to achieve us honor. We stand insulted, mocked and submissive, before a power whose weakness is almost below contempt.

SAVAGE ASSAULT UPON A POLICEMAN.—Policeman JOHN J. QUINN, of the Sixth Ward, (one of the detailed officers at the Court of General Sessions) was terribly beaten on Saturday night in a house of ill-repute, at No. 114 Centre-street, which he entered for the purpose of quelling a disturbance. The moment he entered the place, the same young men who were present locked the door, and then attacked him violently. They knocked him down, kicked him, and beat him so badly about the head and face that his best friends could not recognise him. They then thrust him into the street, from which he made his way to the Station-house, only a few doors distant. Policemen were sent at once to the place where the assault had been committed, but the ruffians had fled. Two of them, FRANCIS COLTMAN and JOHN BURKE were arrested during the forenoon by Sergeant JOURNAY, who brought them before Justice CONNOLLY, at the Lower Police Court. They were fully identified by Mr. QUINN, who made the necessary affidavits against them, after which they were committed to the Tombs for trial.

ANOTHER BRUTAL ASSAULT.—A young woman, giving her name as EMMA JEWETT, and her residence No. 26 Lispenard-street, applied, yesterday morning, at the Lower Police Court, for a warrant for the arrest of JOHN MOORE, whom she charged with committing a felonious assault upon her. Her face was much blackened and bruised, and her head was covered with deep wounds, from which the blood yet oozed. He stated that she had been living with MOORE; that he was "her man," and she was "his woman;" that late on Saturday night she came home with another girl, named ISABEL DOTY, whom she invited to remain all night, because it rained so hard. Some words passed between the parties as to the arrangements that should be made for the accommodation of the visitor. MOORE made a remark which "his woman" resented, and she slapped him on the cheek. MOORE became enraged; he knocked her down with his fist, struck her in the face several times, and, not satisfied with this, seized a washbowl, with which he struck her on the head.

MOORE was arrested and locked up to answer.

MEETING OF THE BOARD OF EXCISE COMMISSIONERS.—There were sixteen licenses granted on Saturday. The Board met, pursuant to adjournment, in the Common Pleas Court room, Part First, at 10 o'clock A. M. The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved.

Dodge, of McComb's Dam, One-hundred and fifty-fourth-street, Andrew Matthew, No. 380 Greenwich street; Albert Crook, No. 195 Washington-street; Isaac Bagwell and William Ray, No. 13 Wall-street. CHARLES A. STETSON, of the Astor House, also applied for an innkeeper's license.

It was resolved to grant licenses to the following persons as innkeepers on the payment by them of $20 each: Robert Earl, Peter Henry Dodge, Henry L. Crocker, Albert Crook, Andrew Matthew, Isaac Bagwell and William Ray; and to the following persons as storekeepers on payment of the same fee: Charles C Dusenbury, Albert T. Albro, Benjamin V. R. Corwin, Albro & Smith, Bethael Bunker, Theodore Burgoyne, A. Bininger & Co., Bininger & Dewitt, Frederick S. Cozzens, J. J. Drummond & Co.

It was resolved that the applications of HIRAM CRAMPTON, of the New-York Hotel; CHARLES A. STETSON, of the Astor House; and HAWLEY D. CLAPP, of the Everett House, be held under further advisement.

The Board adjourned to meet again this morning at 10 o'clock for the purpose of granting licenses. This is the third day that has been assigned to this business, and the Commissioners intend both to grant and receive applications for licenses daily hereafter until the term during which they are authorized to do so has expired.

Many of the storekeepers who were to be prosecuted by the Temperance Alliance, as stated in the TIMES on Saturday, applied during the day for licenses.

Coroners' Inquests.

SUDDEN DEATH OF A WEALTHY CUBAN.—Notice was given at the Coroner's office on Saturday afternoon that EUSEBIUS CIMERO, a gentleman just arrived from Cuba, had died very suddenly that day at the New-York Hotel. Coroner GAMBLE proceeded to the place and held an inquest. Dr. E. ACOSTA testified that about 1 o'clock Saturday morning he was called to attend deceased, and on arriving he was found him dead. He then, assisted by Dr. ISAACS, embalmed the body, when it was shown that deceased was suffering from Bright's disease of the kidney, which caused congestion of the brain. The Jury rendered as their verdict, "Death from Congestion of the Brain." Mr. CIMERO was 60 years of age. He was one of the wealthiest men in Cuba. He arrived on Friday, in the Black Warrior, accompanied by his wife, three children and six servants.

DROWNED.—The body of MICHAEL FITZGERALD, the watchman, who disappeared so mysteriously about two weeks since from the foot of Stanton-street, where he was employed in watching iron, was found, on Saturday, near the foot of Stanton-street. No marks of violence were found upon the body. Coroner GAMBLE held an inquest upon it. No evidence to show in what manner the deceased came into the river was offered. The Jury rendered a verdict: "That deceased came to his death by causes unknown,—supposed drowning." The deceased was a native of Ireland and aged 25 years.

KILLED BY FALLING FROM A WINDOW.—The same Coroner held an inquest, on Saturday, at No. 223 Stanton-street, on the body of FREDERICK BERTE, a child aged 2 years and 6 months, who came to its death by falling from a second-story window. The little fellow, while playing in the room, clambered upon a chair to the window and was precipitated to the sidewalk and was instantly killed. Verdict: "Fracture of the skull from falling out of a window."

Marine Matters.

A BARK BURNED AT SEA.

The Bark W. H. Brodie, Captain MOORE, left New York on the 30th May, for the West Indies, with an assorted cargo. They had light SW winds most of the time until June 12, weather fine and moderate; about 8:50 PM, discovered smoke coming through the cabin bulkhead, and in five minutes afterwards she blew up from powder, which was stowed in between decks under the afterhatch; had just time to get clear of the vessel with two boats, saving nothing whatever. Some of the crew were badly injured by the explosion, and afterwards by falling timber. The bark went down stern first, and afterwards came to the surface, and then fell over on her beam ends. Much of her was gone from midships aft. Lay by her all through the night, and on the next morning was picked up by schooner Diadem, Captain WILBURN, from Baracoa for New York, to whom for his kindness we feel grateful.

SCHOONER LYDIA GIBBS.—Captain WATSON, of schooner Lydia Gibbs, from Providence for Boston, which put into Norfolk 13th instant, after collision with schooner Storm Cloud, of Southport, writes that the accident took place during a severe thunder storm on the night of the 9th, and that both vessels were badly damaged. The cost of repairs on the Lydia Gibbs will amount to about $500.

Schooner B. W. Sanders, previously reported ashore near Squam Beach, was, on Friday morning, got off through the assistance of Messrs. HYSLAUP & BENNETT. She now lies at anchor on the outer bar, and a steamtug has been sent down to tow her to the City.

The Recent Freshets.

GREAT FLOOD AT DANSVILLE!—IMMENSE DAMAGE TO THE CANAL!

From the Rochester Union.

We are this morning favored with intelligence of the flood at the South reported to yesterday. The greatest amount of mischief was done at Dansville, where the Canal has been nearly destroyed, or rendered useless for the season. The rain began to fall on Tuesday afternoon and continued until Thursday without intermission. The water poured from the mountains into the valleys of the Canaseraga and Mill Creeks, and these streams deluged the village of Dansville, sweeping before the flood immense quantities of lumber piled upon the docks. The water was upwards of a foot in depth in the main streets of Dansville.

The branch of the Genesee Valley Canal heads there, and the village is reached by a succession of locks. Three of these locks nearest the village were swept away, or partially destroyed. The aqueduct over the Canaseraga was left standing, but the canal at either end is gone. The damage to the canal and locks is so great that well informed parties doubt whether an attempt will be made to put it in order for navigation the present season. A messenger arrived here this morning for Canal Commissioner WEALDON to proceed to the spot and direct what shall be done. The public abroad will understand that the damage is not to the Genesee Valley Canal proper, but to the Dansville branch of the same.

The loss to the owners of lumber at Dansville must be heavy, as large quantities were piled there. It is said that all has been carried away by the flood and most of it is lodged at Cummingsville, a mile and a half below Dansville.

The Dansville Herald contains the following particulars:

"On Stony Brook, about three miles above this village, a man by the name of BURDICK, had his house, shop and barn swept away, and carried down stream last night; we have not learned the amount of his loss. D. WRITING, Esq., living in the same vicinity, had part of his house, nearly all his clothing and provisions, wagons, farming utensils, etc. taken by the relentless waters."

The dwelling-house of Mr. HOWLAND, near the California House, was nearly "swamped," and the contents considerably damaged, and we understand that Mr. H. was somewhat injured.

Considerable damage has been done at L. SWEET & Co.'s works, at Commonsville, the water completely surrounding and entering their building—it being four feet deep in the moulding rooms.

The Canal bank just above the aqueduct was completely destroyed. The break begins at Commonsville, and came out at the aqueduct, guttering the canal several feet below its bottom. Damage estimated at $5,000.

The bridge over the Canaseraga at the foot of Ossian-street, was about two-thirds carried away, between five and six o'clock yesterday afternoon. The bridge near Porter's Mill was also swept off, and as far as we can learn, the bridges on these spiteful little streams were all destroyed.

All the bridges on Lossy Creek, between that place and Rogersville have also been swept away.

From THOMAS FOGLE, driver of the Dansville and Geneseo stage, we learn some particulars of the state of affairs between here and Geneseo.

There is scarcely a rod of fence left on some farms on the flats; houses have been carried away, with furniture, bedding, &c., the families barely escaped with their lives, some of them being rescued in boats. Trees three feet through, logs, dirt, and almost everything else obstruct the road.

One thing strange about this storm is that at Rochester up to 5 P. M., yesterday, there had not fallen a drop of rain. Passengers on the afternoon train from that city, say there was no appearance of rain having fallen the other side of Conesus Center; between that place and Springwater Station the train passed through water four feet deep.

The damage done by this freshet is estimated at $50,000 for this vicinity alone.

The Freshet—Lives Lost.

From the Binghamton Republican, 19th.

We learn that on Wednesday afternoon and evening last the Six-Mile Creek, at Ithaca, was so swelled by the incessant rains that Halsey's mill and dams were carried away, that the water rose on the main street three feet in half an hour, and 11 or 12 persons were drowned. The railroad track has been torn up for about 100 rods, and it will take a week to repair the track and bridges. The tannery belonging to Mr. STONEBARD was also destroyed. A man climbed upon the top of a tree, which was torn down by the water, and he was hit by a log and carried down the stream some distance.

Destructive Tornado in Central Illinois.

Correspondence of the Chicago Tribune.

PANA, (Christian Co.,) Sunday, June 14, 1857.

Our town was visited, yesterday afternoon, by the most terrific and destructive hail-storm ever known in Christian County. It has destroyed almost everything in its course. It has leveled twenty five houses in our village, and done serious damage to fifty others, mine among them. Many of the houses left standing are rendered worthless, being riven and shattered. Some of the houses have been taken up so clean, and precipitated from their foundations, that you could hardly tell where they had stood. Roofs were carried through the air as if they were straws. A number of new stores, just completed, were torn into fragments, and the wreck scattered about. The new Presbyterian Church was moved some distance, and partially destroyed. The roof of the Illinois Central freight dépôt was taken off; a large number of cars were hurled by the fury of the wind from the track. Quite a number of persons were wounded by timbers and pieces of buildings thrown through the air by the tornado, and I have just heard a report that a woman and three children were killed by a falling building. Others may not recover from their injuries.

The storm was accompanied with a deluge of rain and a heavy shower of hailstones. The air was dark when the awful tornado broke upon us. It was a terrific scene while it lasted. The elements howled and roared; buildings were dashed in the path of the storm; timbers, rails, boards, roofs and every movable article hurled through the air. Strong men stood aghast; women and children screamed with terror. Many were hurled headlong to the ground, and rolled forward by the merciless element. Some of the more ignorant people supposed the comet was about striking the earth, and was causing all the uproar and devastation. They were awfully frightened, believing as they firmly did that the last day had come.

Our pleasant town is in a sad plight—shattered, torn and destroyed. Many of our people are left wholly destitute, escaping from their dwellings with nothing but the few clothes upon their bodies, all their household furniture and other personal property having been swept away or destroyed by the atmospheric deluge. These poor people are left in a very suffering condition, and are proper objects for public benevolence.

The value of property destroyed is variously estimated at 50 to $100,000.

Public Lands—Official Regulations.

Attorney-General BLACK has issued the following important circular:

ATTORNEY-GENERAL'S OFFICE, June 4, 1857.

The following regulations have been prepared for the convenience of those who may have occasion to draw conveyances; make abstracts, or collect evidence of title to lands in cases where it may be the duty of this office to certify concerning the validity of title. A strict observance of them will greatly facilitate the examination, as well as tend to correct conclusions:

1. Trace back from the vendor to the United States and their assigns must be acknowledged according to the laws of the State, District, or Territory where the land lies.

2. A plat or draft of the land should be furnished, showing the boundary lines, their courses and distances, and the adjoining owners, streets, rivers, or other waters.

3. Where the property proposed to be sold consists of more than one place, the titles to which are derived through different persons, the dividing lines must be traced on the draft, and the separate pieces distinctly marked.

4. It is necessary to have an accurate and full abstract of the titles, showing its transmission from the original source to the vendor, with each transfer noted in the proper order of time, the name of each grantor and grantee written at length, with dates showing when the several conveyances were executed, acknowledged and recorded. This abstract must note every fact on which the validity of the title depends, whether it be proved by matter of record, by deed, or en pais.

5. The abstract must be verified by being accompanied, either with the original documents it refers to, or else with copies legally authenticated.

6. The title papers must all be marked with numbers corresponding to the numbers under which they are arranged in the abstract.

7. When an estate in the land has passed by devise, the will and the probate must be shown, and if the devisee is named proof of his identity will be required.

8. Where it has descended from an intestate ancestor to his heirs, satisfactory proof of the condition and number of the descendant's family must be given.

9. If the estate has passed by a judicial sale, or by a sale under the order of any court, or if it has been divided by proceedings in partition, the regularity of the sale or partition must be shown by a copy of the record.

10. The foreclosure of a mortgage can be shown only by an authentic copy of the proceedings held for that purpose.

11. When the wife of a grantor has not joined in a deed, some evidence must be given that he was unmarried at the date of the deed from her.

12. When a deed is executed by the heirs of a person within twenty-one years after his death, evidence will be required to show that they were of full age at the time of the grant.

14. When the title has passed through a corporate body, the charter must be produced, and the authority of the officer who granted away the estate must be shown.

15. When the estate has been conditional, it will be necessary to furnish clear proof that the conditions have been fulfilled or lawfully excused.

16. When the title depends on statute law, other than the public laws of the United States; upon a local law differing from the general rule of the common law; upon a public document, or upon history, the books relied on to establish it should be accurately referred to and the page noted.

17. Presumption arising from lapse of time will be allowed the weight given to them by the judicial tribunals of the State where the land lies. An apparent defect in an old deed need not be explained if the possession of the property has been according to such deed for thirty years or upwards.

18. A title offered to the United States and not to be regarded as invalid on account of any defect in the title which has been barred by a legal limitation. But in all case where time is relied on as constituting an outstanding title of the [illegible] clear proof not only an adverse possession for the full period, but also that [illegible] rights that may be asserted against the United States.

19. Before sending [illegible] examination, they should be satisfied that the [illegible] of the United States for the district in which the land lies. It will be his duty to certify an opinion on the whole title, and to state particularly whether the land titles are correctly stated, the papers properly authenticated, and the facts established by satisfactory proof. Very respectfully,

J. S. BLACK.

Indian Hostilities on the Plains—An Emigrant Train Attacked and Destroyed—Four Men Killed, two Men and one Woman Wounded—The Indians in pursuit of Col. Sumner's Command.

From the St. Louis Republican, 16th inst.

We have just received a letter from Fort Riley, which we publish below, informing us that an emigrant train has been attacked and destroyed by the Cheyenne Indians, about 80 miles west of that post.

It may be recollected that Col. SUMNER left Fort Leavenworth some three or four weeks ago, with six companies of cavalry and two companies of infantry, for the purpose of making war upon the Cheyennes. He divided his force, sending one portion up the Arkansas, under command of Major SEDGWICK, and leading the other himself up the Platte. It would appear that the Indians have slipped down between these two columns, and commenced murdering and robbing in their rear.

We have heard from time to time that the Indians in most warlike indisposition on the Western frontier, and if some army proved, will be difficult to subdue. They number about 1,000 warriors, and will, doubtlessly, be joined by many young Sioux braves, with whom they are closely connected.

As there are a great many emigrants crossing the plains this season, it is very much to be feared that we shall soon hear of other catastrophes similar to that described below:

NEAR FORT RILEY, Tuesday, June 9, 1857.

Mr. EDITOR: Our quiet community has just been thrown into considerable excitement by the news that the Indians, supposed to be the Cheyennes, have attacked a small party of emigrants about 80 miles West of Fort Riley, and killed four men and wounded two men and one woman. One of the survivors, Mr. A. P. WEAVER, has reached this place, and makes the following statement:

"About eighty miles from the Post on the Republican fork of Kansas River, my party had just left camp on the morning of Saturday, the 6th of June, 1857, about 9 o'clock, A. M. About 150 Indians, mounted, charged on our train and surrounded it; they commenced firing on our men; they killed four men of our party. After their guns were discharged, the Indians retired to a creek close by, and continued their fire until we had left the wagons. Before we had got out of sight they had emptied the wagons; a part of them pursued us. Our party consisted of ten men, eight women, and ten children. I met the party coming down in this direction, with two men and one woman wounded, all on foot, and out of provisions. One of the four men killed was endeavoring to escape, but was overtaken, and the last that was seen of him the Indians were dragging him by a lariat.

The names of three of the men killed are S. D. WEAVER, M. LEWIS and SAM SMITH. The wounded are J. HOUSTON, J. SMITH, and a woman, name unknown. Capt. HENDRICKSON, with two companies of the 6th Infantry, who had just arrived here from Leavenworth, has gone out to bring in the survivors. As his command is on foot it will be impossible for him to pursue the Indians, who are all well mounted.

This may be looked upon as the commencement of the Cheyenne war. Col. SUMNER has gone out after this tribe; but one portion of his command is on the Arkansas and the other on the Platte, two hundred miles apart, so that the Indians have a fine chance of slipping in between and getting in his rear, which, it appears, they have done. As the emigration crossing the plains this year is very large, there will be a great loss of life and property unless the Government promptly sends an additional mounted force in that direction. Instead of sending such an unnecessarily large number of troops to Utah, a portion should be sent to chastise the Indians who are murdering and robbing out citizens at our very doors.

Yours, &c.,

A. B."

The Fire at Cape May.

We have the following particulars of the recent destructive fire at Cape May:

"The Mansion House was an old and favorite hotel at this place. It was kept for many years by the owner, Mr. SMITH LUDLAM. At the time of the fire it was in possession of the Sheriff.

The "Kursaal" was a very long building, which was erected some 12 or 13 years ago by Mr. BROLASKY, for dancing purposes, and as a place for public exhibitions, concerts, &c. It was handsomely finished upon the inside, and has been the scene of many pleasant entertainments.

A range of sleeping apartments ran along over the hall. They were connected with the Mansion House, and were used by the guests at that establishment in the height of the bathing season.

Both the Mansion House and the Kursaal were built entirely of wood. As there is no fire apparatus on the island, the flames had their own way, and the immense structures burned furiously until they were consumed. The light caused by the fire was seen at a great distance.

Congress Hall and the Ocean House were greatly endangered, but fortunately both escaped.

The Mansion House was the property of Mr. SMITH LUDLAM, who has kept it for a long time. The Kursaal belonged to Mr. BROLASKY, of Philadelphia.

An insurance of $10,000 upon the Kursaal, expired on Wednesday.

Mormonism in Pennsylvania.

From the York Advocate.

A Mormonite named CHARLES BIRD, one of the followers of JOE SMITH, recruiting for wives for the saints in Utah, visited this place and advertised the community that he would deliver an address in the Market House on last Sunday evening. His audience was quite numerous; but when he commenced his address with an indiscriminate onslaught upon all Christians, he was interrupted by some of his auditors, and the meeting was dispersed by the Police, in order to prevent a row. It must require some assurance to come into a community protected from polygamy by statute laws, for the purpose of advocating the fitness and advantages of such a semi-barbarous state of society.

☞ The Union Singing Association, a German Musical Club, serenaded Justice CONNOLLY on Saturday evening, at his up-town residence. The Justice came out, made a brief speech, and then invited his friends in to partake of some refreshments.

Insurance in Bonded Warehouses.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

SIR: Over the signature of an "Old Merchant," in your paper of this date, there is proof in the old adage of "Straws show which way the wind blows," and if the "Old Merchant" is not the keeper of a storage store I am very much mistaken.

Can he suppose for a moment that the Insurance Companies can wildly rush into danger by writing upon a general assortment of goods, some very good, and some very liable to spontaneous combustion, as is usually contained in storage stores. In the latter cotton is very extensively stored, and the recent large fires in the South prove conclusively the fact that it is subject to spontaneous combustion, and the only thing in its favor is of the large salvage being greater than any other article. Look at the succession of fires in THORNTON & MASON'S, No. 399 Water-street, which probably resulted from the warehouse being closed during Sunday, and no air to ventilate the same. The idea is as novel as it is new, that hemp is liable to spontaneous combustion; and allow me to ask how the oil is to get out of the cask and out of the hay were they in the same warehouse. The difference in the rates is not sufficient to compensate for the extra danger, and the storage stores should be increased to make the risks co-equal. As it is, there are some Insurance Companies who do not, nor will not, write upon merchandise in a storage store, which is a very good evidence of their experience, founded upon past results. Five cents' difference will never increase the profits much, and it is perfectly absurd to think that the Insurance Companies must submit to very heavy losses to accommodate the keepers of storage houses.

A great misunderstanding exists in regard to the recent fire in BAXTER'S store. The lock that was put upon it was obtained for the back doors of his bonded warehouse, and by (him and) the rascally storekeeper, who was discharged, used upon the storage store without permission, and Mr. BAXTER well knew that he had not executed the necessary bond and papers to make it a Bonded Warehouse. He further knew that the bonded goods in that store were there contrary to the rules and regulations of the Treasury Department for Custom-house officers.

The rules of the Department are so very strict upon the subject of bonded goods that the Insurance Companies write very largely upon them and then cannot supply the demand in many of them. Were this rigorous system removed the merchants would be sorely troubled to get insurance at any rate, and rates would naturally be advanced upon them; and unbounded thanks are due for the prompt and efficient manner in which the officers of the Government conduct this vast business. It is true, that there are several grades of Bonded Stores and the rates differ according to class.

AN OLD INSURER.

HER MAJESTY'S CONSUL FOR THE PORT OF NEW-YORK.—After many months' interregnum and an eternity of suspense to the numerous candidates for the office, we learned more than a week ago, through a non-official channel, that a successor to Mr. BARCLAY had been chosen from the long list. We should not, however, have made this information public, until the report was positively confirmed, had not an American contemporary announced the fact, and coupled with it some extremely superfluous remarks. We have reason to believe that Mr. FRANCIS LOUSADA will ere long be gazetted to this office.

It is scarcely necessary for us to say that we are deeply interested in the character and qualifications of the persons selected by our Government to fill the very responsible office of Consul, at the commercial and geographical Metropolis of this country. And if the mere name of Mr. LOUSADA convey with it no direct guarantee for the efficient performance of the highly important duties to be intrusted to him, his antecedents lead us to suppose that he will be found perfectly qualified to satisfy our requirements. On the supposition therefore that it will interest our readers, we may state that Mr. LOUSADA is descended from a most respectable family in Jamaica; that his best services were rendered as precis writer to Lord CARNARVON, then Mr. VILNEUVE and President of the Board of Trade, in 1846; that he was subsequently employed as Secretary to the Merchants' Seamen Fund Commission; that in 1853 he was appointed H. M. Consul at Riga; and transferred thence to Cuba, in 1855, as Arbitrator of the Mixed Commission at Havana, where he at present resides.—N. Y. Albion.

SYMPATHY AMONGTHE NATIVES IN NICARAGUA FOR GENERAL WALKER.—We learn from Mr. HEWITT, who arrived from Greytown day before yesterday, on the Philadelphia, some interesting particulars, which we hasten to lay before our readers. He says that the arrival of the news of the capitulation of WALKER awakened no demonstration of rejoicing among the native population in Greytown, except on the part of a few individuals evidently under the influence of British interests. The number of Costa Ricans now at Greytown do not amount to over eighty men. They are in charge of the river boats. The posts along the whole of the San Juan River are under the occupancy of about three hundred and fifty Costa Ricans. The Nicaraguans, under the agency of some of their leaders, had demanded of them to evacuate their positions, but the request received no attention. A serious struggle was daily anticipated between the Chamoristas and the Leonese, and the war would have, undoubtedly, broken out before this time, were it not for the overawing presence of the Costa Ricans. The people of [illegible] are [illegible] at the turn of events, and it is generally thought, by well informed persons, that but a short time will elapse before they recall General WALKER.
